A Reorganization

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Director James M. Landis of the Office of Civilian Defense yesterday put himself on record as agreeing with virtually everything Congress has been saying against the "frills and extra-legal activities" of OCD, and made it plain he hopes to get rid of them.

At his initial press conference as the first fulltime head the much-criticized agency has had, Director Landis declared OCD is undergoing a thorough overhauling—and indicated neither Mayris Chaney nor Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will be around when the reorganization is completed.

Refers to First Lady

The physical fitness division, in which Miss Chaney, dancer and friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, is director of folk and children's activities, probably will go to the Federal Security Administration and be worked into the recreational program, he said.

If it should stay with OCD, he declared, it will be shorn of all projects except those designed to build up young men of near Army age and to the physical well-being of persons engaged in the war production effort.

Asked specifically about Mrs. Roosevelt, he said

"I certainly hope she will stay at least until the reorganization of her division of community and volunteer participation is completed, and that will not take very long."

Douglas Hired by Landis

Pressed for an answer on whether the First Lady would remain after that, Director Landis said that "I think I can commit myself on that when it comes," leaving the impression he would not hesitate to do so.

A definite step toward pruning OCD rolls of part-time workers was made by Landis yesterday when he asked Hollywood to release Melvyn Douglas, screen star named to head the civilian defense arts council, from his movie contracts.

"Mr. Douglas offered to give up his moving picture commitments when I asked him to take this job

Laura Ingalls To Testify Today

Laura Ingalls, well-known aviatrix, will take the stand today in District Court in an effort to convince a jury of two women and ten men that her slurs on America were merely part of a campaign to expose Nazi agents who, it is charged, paid her to promote antiwar sentiment in the United States.

Miss Ingalls is charged with failure to register as a paid agent for the German government. Should she be convicted, she will face a $1000 fine or a prison term of 8 to 24 months or both.

2 Policemen Hurt As Car, Bus Crash

Two policemen were seriously injured last night when their scout car collided with a Capital Transit bus at Thirteenth and M Streets.

Private Irving Rosenberg, 53, of Second Precinct, suffered a skull fracture, and his partner, Private R. Eugene Danielewicz, 50, broken ribs.

The accident occurred when the officers were responding to a call to settle a domestic squabble. Evening traffic was tied up for about a half hour. Neither driver nor passengers of the bus were hurt.

Conversion Of Government

THE incident of Mrs. Roosevelt's $4600 blonde dancer is of importance only as a symbol.

The public reaction measures the feeling that there is too little awareness in Government that first things come first.

Mention was made of public complacency in America at the President's press conference Tuesday. The President said there was a certain amount of public complacency but that the American people are beginning to be more realistic.

The Post submits that the American people are more realistic about the war than the United States Government.

The Post submits that if there is any one industry in this country which needs conversion to a wartime basis it is our Government.

The Government stopped the automobile industry to convert it to a wartime armament program. This was absolutely necessary. All over the country thousands of men, many here in Washington, the dealers, not the manufacturers, are without a livelihood. Many lack the wherewithal to pay this year's income taxes.

There was no mass protest about this from the automobile dealers. They took it without a whimper like good soldiers. The country comes first.

NOW take a look at Government.

Everyone knows that the Army, Navy and allied departments must expand to tremendous proportions.

But what are the departments not directly concerned with war doing?

It requires no expert to answer that question.

Department heads are running around town trying to grab this and that war activity to build up their own importance, and to perpetuate their own jobs, regardless of what is already being done.

They know, and everyone in Washington familiar with Government knows, that many of their operations can be merged, or greatly curtailed without any great loss and that thousands of valuable employes can be converted into war workers.

There are scores of splendid employes in these departments who know Government procedure, who can, through their knowledge of routine, remove bottlenecks in war departments and save this country millions of dollars—if the Government is interested.

A large cut in these departments tomorrow, with employes thrown into a pool for war departments, would cause no hardship, no permanent loss in efficiency, and would build up essential Government industry tremendously.

The people are going to demand this, in months to come. They are going to be paying half their income in taxes, they are going to see their sons marching away in increasing numbers. They will make whatever sacrifice is required gladly. But they are not going to stand for cockeyed social reformers and professional project planners doing their best to use men, material and money when American soldiers are fighting without airplanes.

So don't worry about the people, Mr. President. They are nothing if not realistic.

And they would hail you as never before if you converted our Government to a wartime basis and set the example for the entire country.

WHAT do we mean by conversion and where would we start?

There are many different agencies in Washington building homes. It is a public scandal and the duplication and waste is appalling. Merge them into one and save men and money.

The National Youth Administration is absolutely superfluous. Transfer the youth defense training feature to the United States Office of Education, doing the same thing.

The CCC today is without function. There is not a boy on its rolls who can't get a job.

The Railroad Retirement Board is moving to Chicago. There is no reason for its existence except in the eyes of the rail union lobby. Merge it with Social Security.

The REA is violating orders from Nelson's office to conduct unessential projects. Confine it to military purposes.

Department of Agriculture can be cut and splendidly trained employes used to greater advantage.

The fight between OCD and Paul McNutt's Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services on their overlapping activities has been ridiculous. OCD has been duplicating almost everything McNutt started. Half the departments of OCD can be eliminated to advantage.

So it goes—right down the line—duplication everywhere.

HALF the parasites in Washington are coordinators and fancy titled people in screwball jobs, doing their best to think of something to start that will outstrip another department doing the same thing.

This does not sound like wartime operations. The people who desperately want to save our country are definitely not complacent about it either.

We have got to be tough and smart to win this war.

Let's start in our own back yard and convert the Government to strictly essential and war industries.

No More Beer or Beans in Cans

Consumer Use of Rubber And Tin Further Restricted

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The impact of the Government's drive to conserve scarce war materials fell heavily on American consumers yesterday in the form of these three restrictive moves:

1. Rationing Chief Leon Henderson announced that beginning February 19, retreaded and recapped tires would be rationed, with the probability that even retreads will be allotted only to those categories already eligible to buy new tires.

2. The War Production Board ordered severe restrictions in use of tin for canning, with the total cut amounting to about 40 per cent. After March 1 canning of such products as coffee, pork and beans, cereals, flour, baking powder, petroleum products, spices and condiments, beer, dog food and tobacco must be stopped.

3. The WPB also ordered heavy cuts of rubber in the production of ten major categories of civilian goods, including new tires, hose, rubber clothing, boots and shoes, and bicycle tires. Total savings of 25,000 tons of rubber annually are expected.

Although the details of the impending rationing order for re-

'Gearing Up Nation'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Conversion of industry and related war efforts will place up to four million workers temporarily on the unemployed lists during 1942, Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt and War Labor Director Sidney Hillman told a House committee yesterday.

Recommending a maximum $24-a-week unemployment benefit for 25 weeks, to train and hold displaced workmen available for new defense tasks, they called the program essential for "cushioning the shock" of the change-over and "gearing the Nation for full war production."

All Due to War Efforts

Before the House Ways and Means Committee, itself divided on the plan that some charged would virtually "Federalize" State unemployment compensation systems, Hillman and McNutt asked Congress to authorize at once a $300,000,000 Federal appropriation to supplement State payments described as "inadequate."

McNutt told the committee that 400,000 in the automobile industry alone will be left temporarily jobless, additional "hundreds of thousands" now employed in selling automobiles and accessories must find other work, and "almost all unemployment in this country will shortly be attributable directly or indirectly to the national war effort."

Only Stop-Gap Measure

The relief plan would apply not only to workers displaced by plant conversions, but to all workers covered by the Social Security unemployment laws on the theory that all unemployment occurring during this emergency year is the indirect

3 Cruisers, Sub And a Destroyer Sunk; Soerabaja Raid Beaten Off

Bulletin

San Francisco, Feb. 11 (INS).—A Japanese transport was set afire and two Japanese fighter planes were shot down in a raid by Royal Australian Air Force bombers on the enemy-occupied harbor of Gasmatta on the southeast coast of New Britain, radio Canberra announced tonight.

By the United Press

Batavia (Thursday), Feb. 12. Dutch forces defending Amboina sank five Japanese warships before the strategic air and sea base in the Molucca Islands was lost to the Japanese, it was announced today.

The announcement followed an earlier communique revealing that Dutch fighter planes yesterday scattered a force of Japanese bombers headed for Soerabaja, the only naval stronghold left to the Allies between Australia and India, now that a Japanese occupation of Singapore is at hand.

Shore Guns Play Part

The five Nipponese warcraft destroyed by shore batteries and mines at Amboina, the Aneta news agency said, quoting the Dutch naval command, were three cruisers, a destroyer and a submarine.

All the ships were sent down during the first week of the Japanese attack on Amboina, where the Japanese now are consolidating their positions, it was said.

One Japanese cruiser was sunk February 2. It went down immediately when it hit a mine in the field guarding the entrance to Amboina Bay. The following day there was a terrific underwater explosion in the mine field and it was established that an enemy submarine had been demolished.

2d Cruiser Hit Mine, Too

On February 5 watchers saw a Japanese cruiser along the coast enveloped in flames after six heavy explosions at a spot where a mine field had been laid. Later it was established that this ship also was destroyed.

Earlier 15-inch coast defense guns, on February 1, had shelled and sunk an enemy cruiser and a destroyer.

Meantime, it was said, the aerial defenses of Soerabaja and other points in Java had been strengthened and that yesterday's dispersal

'Not Japanese Superiority'

Reporter Blames Singapore's Fate on Failure to Prepare

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—Cecil Brown, radio correspondent censored off the air by authorities at Singapore as a detriment to morale because of his charges that the British were complacent, was back on the air tonight for the first time since then and, through the Australian censorship at Sydney, broadcast his charges in detail.

"The tragic story of Singapore," said Brown, of the Columbia Broadcasting System, "is not all one of Japanese numerical superiority, fanatical courage and brilliant military scheming. The Japanese are at Singapore also because of what the British failed to foresee, prepare for and meet at the crucial moment."

Before December 7 the British thought a Japanese attack was unbelievable, said Brown, adding they neglected to train their soldiers for jungle fighting, were unable to distinguish between Chinese and Japanese and permitted establishment of what he called an amazing Fifth Column organization in Malaya.

After the Japanese attack, Brown continued, the British failed to carry out the "scorched earth" policy despite assertions to the contrary, and they created "considerable difficulties" with the natives in Malaya by favoring Europeans in the evacuation of the island of Penang.

In this broadcast Brown said:

"I just arrived in Sydney from Singapore and Batavia.

"Those are great distances, but from my observation of operations out here, they may not mean much to the Japanese attackers. The picture in the Pacific is very far from optimistic.

"At no point are the Japanese being held by the Allied forces.

"Singapore very probably will be in Japanese hands in the next 24 to 72 hours. Japanese submarines and surface raiders will then operate in the Indian Ocean.

"The position of Rangoon and therefore supplies to the Chinsese, will become critical. Dutch Sumatra may be taken and the fate of Java will be decided in the next three or four weeks.

"From what I've seen of Japanese driving power and Allied manpower

Red Ski Troops Take Key Town In Pincers Push

Russians Hurdle Another Barrier on Path to Smolensk

By the United Press

Moscow, Feb. 11.—Russian ski troops, gliding 9 miles behind the German lines under cover of a snowstorm, have captured Maklaki, 25 miles north of Bryansk, and thus hurdled another barrier in the pincers drive on Smolensk, the Red army reported tonight.

A strategic communications center in the network between Bryansk and Vyazma, Maklaki is near Zhisdra and about 140 miles southeast of Smolensk. The Soviet push up through that sector appeared to be synchronized with the drive on Smolensk from the north where a salient already has reached the Velikie Luki region and is being expanded southward.

Mopping Up Areas

The white-clad ski legions, at home on the deep snow which immobilized German mechanized equipment, were said to be operating over a wide area with a particular proficiency at stealing through weak points on the German lines.

The Red army, crushing German counterattacks, continued its offensive Wednesday and won new ground, the Soviet night communique said. Twelve German planes were destroyed with eight Russian losses Tuesday, and two raiders were downed in the Moscow region Wednesday.

Although the front-wide Red army offensive seemed to have fallen off in the last ten days, because of both stiffening German resistance and winter storms, reports indicated the Russians still were pushing on. Special attention was being paid to cleaning out areas around key cities

Dutch Admiral Replaces Hart In Pacific Post

American, Ill, Had Asked to Be Relieved Of Naval Command

Post Staff Writer

Command of all Allied naval forces in the southwest Pacific passed from American to Dutch hands yesterday, in the first shakeup of the United Nations high command during the two-months-old Pacific war.

Admiral Thomas C. Hart, 64-year-old Allied naval chief in the Far East, was replaced by Vice Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich of the Royal Netherlands Navy, nick-named "Ship-a-Day Helfrich" for the work of his little Dutch Indies fleet in the early weeks of the war.

In announcing the shift the Navy Department here said that "scrappy Tommy Hart"—as he is known throughout the American Navy—had asked to be relieved because of ill health.

In Key Position

The move puts a Dutch official in a key position in the United Nations' southwest Pacific high command at a time when the defense of the rich Netherlands East Indies becomes the major operation of the Pacific war.

Until the appointment of Admiral Helfrich as "acting commander, combined ABDA area"—American-British - Dutch - Australia theater — the Dutch held no major post in the high military comand of the vital area, although their territory was invaded and their forces were playing an important defense role.

A naval spokesman here said that Helfrich probably would direct the Allied naval forces from a land headquarters and that actual operation of the combined fleets would be

Short of Planes, Men, Equipment, Without Hope, Allies Fight On

By William Smith White
Associated Press War Editor

Singapore—a smoking hulk of a mighty base, a broken symbol of empire and the scene of a British defeat of terrible consequences—was as good as gone last night.

On Singapore Island the tragic drama was fast running out. Short of air power, short of men, short of equipment, bankrupt of hope, the British imperial line counterattacked with pathetic gallantry that was serving only one limited purpose: to buy brief time against the fall of what had been the very seat and home of British power in the Pacific.

The British command announced that the Japanese had dropped from the air a note demanding unconditional surrender; to this, it was stated, "no reply has been made."

This same communique told of an uninterrupted enemy advance and continued bitter fighting.

Japanese "Mopping Up"

A Japanese dispatch from the Singapore front, picked up in the United States by radio, said advance Japanese units were continuing their penetration of Singapore City, "mopping up resistance wherever it is offered."

The race course in the northwest suburban area was reported occupied soon after the first entrance into the city area at 8:30 a. m., Wednesday, it was stated.

"From south and west comes the crackle of rifle fire and the running drum of machine-guns," said the account. "British batteries on the peak opened fire as the Japanese approached along the highway from the Kranji area where they landed just west of the causeway. The British were driven from their positions and then hand-to-hand fighting broke out in darkness so intense that it was difficult to tell friend from foe.

"The British fell back toward Singapore, with Japanese in pursuit."

The scene of the fighting thus described was said to be the Bukit Temah Road, "last British line protecting Singapore from Pajang to Bukit Temas Heights."

Enemy's Weight Overwhelming

In the fighting along the road, it was acknowledged, "survivors of the British force managed to make good their escape" into Singapore City.

The island's women and children were being taken out through a harbor red with enemy fire.

The attacking Japanese land forces were estimated to run as high as 60,000; aloft and afield the enemy's weight was cruelly overwhelming.

And while the successful campaign for Singapore was approaching that end which for days had appeared all but inevitable, the Japanese Burma army occupied Martaban, on the west bank of the Salween River, and thus seized a bridgehead to send troops across the Salween estuary against Rangoon, source of the Burma Road supply line to China.

25% Reduction in Speed Boosts Tire Mileage 80%

(Traffic deaths in the United States in 1941 totaled 40,000—more Americans than will be killed this year in war, in all probability. The figure increases despite all educational effort.

(Perhaps speed-demons will be more impressed by the fact that speed burns up tires—and tires are now rationed.

(It is an alluring prospect—that reckless drivers may be inadvertently forced to sane speeds—and thousands of lives saved.)

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

At 70 miles per hour, tire tread wear is twice as fast as at 45.

With normal wear occurring at an average speed of 30 M. P. H., 22 per cent of the rubber is wasted at 40 miles, 40 per cent at 50 and 55 per cent at 60 M. P. H.

By reducing your average speed by 25 per cent, you can increase your tire mileage by more than 80 per cent.

Fast driving is particularly injurious to tires in hot weather Everything else being equal, the wear and tear is five times greater at 100 degrees than it is at 40 degrees. Partial compensation will be provided by slowing up in summer.

The foregoing is a summarization of facts gathered from the Rubber Manufacturers Association, American Automobile Association, Bureau of Standards and the B. F. Goodrich Co.

W. L. Holt, tire expert of the Bureau of Standards, emphasizes that high speed is probably the most important single factor in shortening tire life. The faster the revolutions, the greater the heat generated. And the higher the rubber's temperature, the faster it disintegrates. As simple as it is true.

The carcass, or body of the tire suffers, not only the tread, under-the punishment of excessive speed. There lies the hidden danger. A casing that looks quite safe, with some of its nonskid tread still intact, may blow out suddenly because of carcass failure, induced by internal heat.

"This is especially likely to occur," says Holt, "if the tire contains a large percentage of reclaimed rubber."

"Thousands of tons of rubber, now so vital to national defense, can be saved yearly if motorists will exercise greater care in the use of their tires," according to John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Co.

"These savings are possible, without any restrictions on motor travel, or 'gasless Sundays,' which would curb tire use, for rubber today is being wasted by motorists who drive at excessive speed or otherwise misuse their rubber tires."

The heavy-footed driver is squandering not only his tires, but his gas-

Japs Attack With Material MacArthur Sent in '23 Quake

(Entire Jap formation of six planes shot down by U. S. fliers. Page 4.)

Bread cast upon the waters has been returned to America—in Japanese fashion.

Eighteen years ago, a compassionate America sent a relief fleet to aid the Japanese people, who were digging out from one of the most disastrous earthquakes and fires in the history of the world.

Last week, some of the relief equipment then generously given to the suffering Japanese came back into American hands. It was being used against the United States by the Jap invasion army in the Philippines and was captured by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces.

The War Department told the story in a war communique last night.

Several barges used by the Japs in attempting landings on the west coast of Bataan during the past week, it was said, were taken by MacArthur's men. They were found to contain life saving and other equipment marked "United States Army Transport Merritt."

"This equipment was part of the relief supplies given to Japan by the United States after the disastrous earthquake and fire which devastated much of Japan in 1923," the War Department said.

American Fliers Shoot Down Squadron of 6 Jap Fighter Planes Over Luzon

MacArthur Reports Loss Of One Plane

Gen. Douglas MacArthur notified the War Department yesterday of a "spectacular" air battle over Bataan Peninsula Monday in which a squadron of six Japanese planes was destroyed. One American fighter was lost.

Details of the thrilling aerial duel were reported last night as MacArthur's hard-pressed troops won a day's respite from the heavy fighting—a lull, however, that appeared to foreshadow another Japanese drive.

The destruction of the enemy planes was reported by MacArthur Tuesday, but the communique then gave no indication as to whether they were shot down by American fighters or the defending antiaircraft batteries.

The text of War Department communique No. 101, telling of the action, follows:

"1. Philippine Theater: The savage fighting in Bataan, as well as enemy air activity, has appreciably lessened. However, movements of hostile reinforcements indicate early resumption of an attack in force against our positions.

"There were intermittent artillery exchanges between the guns of our fortifications and enemy batteries on the Cavite shore. Our counter-battery fire appears to have been effective.

"Gen. MacArthur has sent to the War Department additional details of the aerial combat on February 9 in which several enemy planes were shot down. Several of our P-40 fighters were escorting a slow biplane trainer on a photographic mission over Cavite Province when they encountered six enemy fighter planes. The ensuing combat was one of the most spectacular that has been waged in the Philippine campaign.

"Capt. Jesus Villamor, of the Philippine Air Force, who recently was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster, for repeated acts of extraordinary heroism, was the pilot of the photographic plane and had landed when the enemy planes appeared. Our escorting fighters, instead of landing, vigorously engaged the enemy aircraft. A series of thrilling dog fights ensued. Four enemy fighters were immediately shot down. A fifth was crippled and veered off to the north, landing on an air field near Pilar where it was destroyed by our artillery. The sixth plane fell out of control and was ultimately found where it crashed in the mountains of Bataan. This accounted for all of the enemy planes engaged in the combat. One of our planes is missing.

The Russians were withholding place names for the most part, giving rise to expectations of announcements of big scale successes.

But the daily toll of hundreds of Germans bespoke a continuing drive. For instance, the early communique of the high command told of the killing of nearly 3000 enemy troops in three unidentified sectors.

On the central front a fierce skirmish left 400 German dead on the field and netted the Russians four tanks, four guns and other equipment and materiel.

In one day of fighting on the Leningrad Front 1500 Germans were reported slain and 46 earth and wood fortifications destroyed. Freshly reinforced German units undertook counterattacks in an area of the Southern Front but were repulsed and lost 850 dead. Twenty prisoners captured by the Russians included a major.

Marshal Timoshenko's army of the Ukraine was said to be increasing the pressure on Kharkov, where ferocious hostilities have been going on for more than a month.

In advancing toward Smolensk, Gen. Zhukov's army was said to have captured four more villages. The high command said guerrilla units were especially active in the Smolensk region under Vice Admiral William A. Glassford, jr., of the American Navy. Glassford, named commander of the United States naval units in the area only last week, is a brother of Gen. Pelham D. (Happy) Glassford, former Washington police chief.

They burned a bridge over which the Germans transported ammunition to the front, interrupting traffic on that route for days. Another band blew up a railway bridge. Still another ambushed a German motor convoy and killed a German general.

Knows His Way Around

Navy men here say that Helfrich is one of the best informed naval leaders in the Far East. He is a native of Java, and the waters of East Indies are as familar to him as the Caribbean is to our ranking naval chiefs.

Short, rotund, and baldish, the 55-year-old Dutch admiral has spent 20 of his 34 years in the Netherlands navy in the Far East. A graduate of the Den Helder Naval College in Holland, he has held staff posts at The Hague as well as sea assignment both in European and East Indian waters. His full name is Conrad Emil Lambert Helfrich.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, praised the Dutch naval leader in a statement declaring that he will have "the loyal support of all Americans."

Helfrich's record, he stated, indicates that he is "a leader upon whom the United States as well as all our Allies can rely."

Walsh also lauded the work of Admiral Hart in the Far East and spoke of his "long and brilliant naval career."

Navy men here have praised Hart's feat of getting his little fleet, together with its slow-moving supply ships, out of the Japanese-dominated Philippine waters virtually intact. He withdrew his forces to the Dutch East Indies and subsequently launched them against a 100-ship Jap convoy in Macassar Strait, taking a heavy toll of the force.

Although already beyond the Navy retirement age, Admiral Hart is not leaving active service, a Navy spokesman said. What new assignment he will have, however, was not disclosed.

Hart was given command of all Allied naval forces in the Southwest Pacific following the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting here in December. At the same time, a British general, Sir Archibald Wavell was made supreme commander of all land, sea and air forces of the United Nations in the area, and another American, Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, was appointed deputy supreme commander.

Chiang Tops in China Theater

Coincidently, Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese generalissimo, was named Supreme Allied Commander in the China theater.

This left the Dutch without representation on the high command, although Admiral Helfrich, commander in chief of the Netherlands East Indies navy, became second in command to Admiral Hart.

Helfrich had had his little fleet—about the same size as our Asiatic force—at sea a week before the war broke out, December 7. One of his submarines sank four Jap transports during the first day of the war.

Described as a jovial and gregarious man who is fond of parties, Helfrich has also been known to speak his mind in blunt fashion. Five years ago, speaking before a British audience in Singapore, he declared that if Sumatra were invaded, the Dutch expected the British to come to their aid. He received a mild diplomatic rebuke for his outspokenness.

5 Army Airmen Killed, 1 Missing In Bomber Crash

Windsor Locks, Conn., Feb. 11 (AP). Army officials at Bradley Field announced tonight that five men had been killed and another was missing in the crash of a multimotored plane, on a routine flight, between East Granby and Tariffville just west of here.

The dead were Second Lieut. Walter C. Boyle of La Crosse, Wis.; Staff Sergt. Michael Kaufam of Windsor Locks; Sergt. Gordon G. Johnson, of Renova, Pa.; Sergt. John T. Howey, of New York City, and Sergt. Thomas F. Quinn, of Upper Darby, Pa.

A sixth occupant of the plane, whose name was withheld, was reported as missing. Officials said an open parachute had been found near East Willington, Conn.

Mothers' Club, Cadets Give Dance Tonight

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Associate Justice Frank Murphy will head the list of patrons for the annual dance and card party tonight by the Mothers Club and the Cadets of St. John's College at the Shoreham Hotel. In addition to Mrs. Roosevelt and Justice Murphy the list of patrons include Congressional and educational notables and dignitaries of the Catholic Church.

Tanker Sunk Off New Jersey In Daylight

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—The Standard Oil tanker W. L. Steed was torpedoed to the bottom of the Atlantic in broad daylight off New Jersey February 2, the Navy reported today with the landing of three survivors from a crew of 38.

Three lifeboats containing an undisclosed number of men still are missing.

An Axis submarine hit the ship with one torpedo at 12:45 p. m. and the crew left the vessel in four lifeboats, Able-bodied Seaman Louis Hartz, 38, of Philadelphia, said.

"The sub then fired 17 shells into the sinking ship," he asserted. "It surfaced about 200 yards from the lifeboats and looked them over carefully. We saw eight or nine Germans on the conning tower."

Hartz declared the submarine headed for the southwest still on the surface.

Besides Hartz the survivors landed here were Ralph Mazzucco, 23, able-bodied seaman, and Joaquim R. Vrea, 39, boatswain, both of New York City.

They said they were rescued after two days in a lifeboat in subzero weather by an unidentified Allied vessel, which took them to another Allied port before bringing them to New York.

The 6182-ton tanker was built at Quincy, Mass., in 1918. She was 416 feet long and her home port was Wilmington, Del. She was considered almost a sister ship of the tanker Allan Jackson, which was sunk January 18.

25 Ships Now Sunk

The sinking announced today brought the total number of ships lost off the Atlantic coast to 25 since January 12. This number includes 14 off the American coast. Another, the Malay, was damaged but reached port.

The ship was captained by Harold G. McAvenia, Greenbush, Mass. Hartz said he was in the chart room with the captain when a sudden crash threw him against a wall.

"The room immediately was enveloped with a dark brown smoke that smelled like sulphur burning," Hartz said. "I was ordered aft to the lifeboat station."

Lifeboat Seen, but Sub Bars Rescue by Liner

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—A South American steamship sighted a lifeboat containing a number of bodies off the Atlantic Coast yesterday but was forced to give up attempts to investigate the boat when a submarine appeared in the vicinity, the Third Naval District reported tonight.

As the ship hove to and lowered a lifeboat to investigate, the Navy announcement said, an officer on the bridge observed a periscope.

"The steamship immediately got under way and reported the situation to the Navy," the announcement added. "Shortly afterward an American bomber appeared over the ship."

The liner was escorted from then on by bombers, reaching an Atlantic Coast port today.

Last American Newspaperman in Singapore Writes His Last Dispatch While Bombs Burst

Sees Enemy Planes In Murderous Dives Just Before He Leaves

(Editor's note: This is the last dispatch from the last American newspaper correspondent to leave the battle gloom of Singapore. It is from C. Yates McDaniel, mild-mannered China-born war correspondent of the Associated Press. It is reproduced here precisely as it was received—McDaniel will write no new lead, to use his own words, "for many days.")

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press War Correspondent

Singapore 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, 11:30 p. m. E. W. T Tuesday).—The sky over Singapore is black with smoke of a dozen huge fires this morning as I write my last message from this once beautiful, prosperous and peaceful city.

The roar and crash of cannonade and the bursting of bombs which are shaking my typewriter and my hands, which are wet with nervous perspiration, tell me without the need of an official communique that the war which started nine weeks ago, 400 miles away, is today in the outskirts of this shaken bastion of empire.

I am sure there is a bright tropic sun shining somewhere overhead, but in my many windowed room it is too dark to work without electric lights.

Planes in Murderous Dives

Over the low rise where the battle is raging I can see relay after relay of Japanese planes circling, then going into murderous dives upon our soldiers, who are fighting back in a hell over which there is no protecting screen of fighter planes.

But the Japanese are not completely alone in the skies this morning! I just saw two "Wildbeasts"—obsolete biplanes with an operating speed of about 100 miles an hour—fly low over the Japanese positions and unload their bomb burdens with a resounding crash.

It makes me rather ashamed of myself, sitting here with my heart beating faster and faster than their old motors, when I think what chance those lads have of getting back in their antiquated machines. If ever brave men earned undying glory, those R. A. F. pilots have on this tragic morning.

There are many other brave men in Singapore today. Not far away are antiaircraft batteries in open spaces—they must be, to have a clear field of fire.

Packet of Bombs Lands

. . . Pardon the breaks in continuity but a packet of bombs just landed so close that I had to duck behind a wall which I hoped would—and it did—screen the blast . . .

But those gun crews keep on fighting, their guns peppering the smoke-limited ceiling every time the Japanese planes come near, and that is almost constantly.

The all clear has just sounded—what a joke! For from the window I can see three Japanese planes hedge-hopping, not a mile away.

A few minutes ago I heard one of the most tragic-two-way telephone conversations. Eric Davis, director of the Malayan Broadcasting Corporation, urged the Governor, Sir Shenton Thomas, to give permission to destroy an outlying broadcasting station. The Governor demurred, saying the situation was not too bad, and refused to direct the order. Davis telephoned the station in question, instructing them to keep on the air but to stand by for urgent orders.

"Stand Firm"—Then Silence

We tuned in on the wave length of the station in question. In the middle of the broadcast in Malay, urging the people of Singapore to stand firm, the station went dead.

At my elbow while I write this last message is Capt. O. F. Fearon, ministry of information adviser on censorship, who is breakfasting on biscuits and brandy.

Henry Steel, of Richmond, Surrey (England), army public relations officer, who has seen us through a bad situation from the Thai border to Singapore, just told me I had ten minutes to pack up and leave.

When Henry says go, I go, so goodby from Singapore.

F. Y. Tong, of Canton, who has been landlord for the British ministry of information and the Malayan subsidiary of the B. B. C., just showed me three famous Chinese paintings he is carrying with him to the vessel on which the ministry of information, the Malayan Broadcasting Subsidiary, M. B. C., and this first-to-arrive and last-to-leave foreign correspondent are now embarking with less than 50 per cent chance of getting clear of this close-beleaguered fortress . . .

And This Is the End

Definitely last:

I am leaving now in a car which I swear I will put into forward gear and head straight into the Strait of Malacca. I left one car for the Japanese in Nanking in 1937, but never again.

Don't expect to hear from me for many days, but please inform Mrs. McDaniel, Hotel Preanger, Bandoeng, Java, that I have left this land of the living and dying.

McDANIEL.

The President's Day

By International News Service

ROOFS: Somewhat before the appointed hour of 10:30 a. m., Budgeter Harold Smith and Uncle Fred Delano arrived with their passel of headaches—chief of which is the problem of where they are going to build roofs for the heads of the endless thousands of wartime workers pouring into Washington to man typewriter and file—and where the money is going to come from and how. Nathan Straus, whose resignation as United States housing administrator leaves him without a roof too, came in later. Straus hasn't been in his office for about four weeks and is hanging around at the request of the President who wants to find a spot for him in the wartime Government beehive.

A DASH OF DEMOCRATS: Escorted by powerful Senator Walter George, Ellis Arnall, attorney general of Georgia, came to call on the President, ostensibly to talk over the Warm Springs Foundation—but actually to get in a little spade work on a forthcoming campaign to grab the Governor's seat from Eugene (Red-Suspenders) Talmadge. Then came Democratic Chairman Flynn to talk over those Jackson Day dinners on the twenty-third, designed to feed the starving Democratic kitty—and the speech which Mr. Roosevelt will coincidentally deliver that evening from his fireside to the Nation at large on the war—and not politics.

REPORTS: Among other things duly received with thanks were a couple of diplomatic reports. . . . Venezuelan Ambassador Senor Escalante came in to talk over "matters of mutual interest . . . and had a very satisfactory conversation." Eyes-and-Ears Bill Bullitt dropped by just before lunch to finish up his first-hand report on the Middle East begun ten days ago. After that lunch rolled in.

GUESS WHO? Rather surprisingly the first caller after lunch was Alf Landon, the old foe Mr. Roosevelt defeated in the Presidential elections of '36. Landon just came around to pay his respects, say a few words about the great job that must be done in this great country. He reported that the rumors that he was making a lot of money in oil were grossly exaggeraated

WAR: Things looked blacker in the Far East and Mr. Roosevelt was eager indeed to talk to Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps. After Arnold came Secretary of War Stimson and Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall for a high command pow-wow and strategy study.

FAMILY MATTERS: Closing up his office around 6 p. m., the President went over to the White House and for a short time changed into Poppa Roosevelt, talked by telephone to his son and namesake, Franklin jr., who was operated on for appendicitis in the Brooklyn Navy Hospital Monday. Dinner was a quiet, relaxed period with a few close friends around the table.

Millions Reaped in War Profits, Report Charges

Committee Scores Delay in Halting Brokers' Practices

By Arthur Hachten

International News Service Staff Writer

Defense brokers have reaped "untold millions" from the taxpayers of the United States, a Congressional committee charged yesterday in demanding the Department of Justice take action against these "profiteers" and that the War Department overhaul its system for letting contracts.

The allegations were made by a House Military Affairs Subcommittee, headed by Representative Charles L. Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, which for months has been investigating defense progress. It was the third Congressional committee alleging waste in the defense effort, following reports by the Truman-Senate committee and the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Defense brokers or contract vendors, as the Faddis committee described them, have garnered commissions ranging from 3 to 75 per cent of defense subcontracts, and this condition was said to be "widespread."

The Faddis committee said Administration agencies have "belatedly" adopted some recommendations made by it in a previous report.

"Price People Must Pay"

"But what of the price the American people must pay for this additional delay?" asked yesterday's report. "Encouraging words of our propaganda bureaus can never make up this loss. Where are the stocks of strategic and critical materiel?

"The American people can and will adjust themselves to a war economy, but there will come a day when they will ask why the crushing adjustment was necessary with such suddenness.

"Ask the manufacturers (especially the little ones), the distributors, the salesmen, the servicemen and the users of consumers' durable goods about our real social gains. Where now is our security?

Much of the committee's findings were based upon its inquiry into huge munitions contracts awarded to the Remington Arms Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., and subcontracts handled for Remington by Leon K. Shanack, of New York, subcontractor and commission agent.

The report cited the operations of Shanack, commission agent, New York City; De Lisser Machine & Tool Co., of New York; Transcontinental Machine & Tool Co., of New York, and Remington Arms Co., of Bridgeport, as indicative of a widespread use of commission agents, defense brokers and vendors, whose profits "run into untold millions and are paid for by the taxpayers of this Nation."

Big Bank Balance

Shanack's background was described as that of "a truck salesman and fight promoter."

The report said his bank account "at one time in November, 1940, showed a balance of $74,717.51, revealing deposits for the same period in the amount of $290,074.21. It must be kept in mind that all this income resulted directly from profits on national defense contracts."

The committee said that although Shanack did not have a machine shop of his own he was able to obtain orders from Remington, and that Shanack has admitted that on a total of $263,666.83 of orders for perishable tools received during the first ten months of 1941, he "earned a profit of $124,743.22."

Other findings of the committee were:

"That the De Lisser Machine & Tool Co. on a series of orders from the Remington Arms Co. amounting to $871,049 was estimated to average 50 per cent profit.

Interference Charged

"That the Remington Arms Co. has failed to perform its contracts relating to the manufacture of small arms ammunition as provided . . ."

"That there has been evidence tending to show interference with the 'spread the work' program to concentrate industries in centers of population where it will be necessary to build defense housing units following the tendency of the 'welfare sponsors,' entailing a tremendous unnecessary cost to the taxpayer."

The committee recommended that the War Department deduct from future contracts all profits over 1 per cent obtained by commission brokers handling subcontracts.

Army, Navy Study Insurance Plan

Spokesmen for the War and Navy Departments testified yesterday that they favored universal Government insurance for all civilians against hazards of personal injury and death resulting from war risks.

Commander A. A. Ort told a Senate labor subcommittee that the Navy already was operating such a compensation program on a temporary basis.

Maj. Reese F. Hill, from the War Department's insurance section, said that private companies were not able to protect against full war risks because of the large premiums that would be required.

He probably will go to Florida, but the date has not been fixed.

500 Millions Voted for China

Congress yesterday completed action on the 500-million-dollar war fund for China. The appropriation was approved by the Senate and the House swiftly concurred in a minor amendment.

President Roosevelt's signature on the measure will make it possible for the Chinese government to stabilize its internal situation and carry on the fight against the Japanese.

An underlying purpose of the measure is to counteract Japanese propaganda aimed at getting the Chinese to quit the fight and to show the Chinese that the United States will continue to back them in the war.

Senate Group Approves Standley Nomination

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved unanimously yesterday President Roosevelt's nominations of Rear Admiral William H. Standley to be Ambassador to Russia and of Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, to be Minister to New Zealand.

The Boy Who Never Stopped Growing

In the quiet backwater of New Salem, Illinois, a century ago, the boy Lincoln found plenty of tasks at hand . . . but his mind was always soaring out beyond. The boy became a man, increasing in wisdom as well as stature. Splitting rails or tending store never kept him from watching the cavalcade of events . . . and as he watched there was kindled in him a sense of responsibility to his fellow man. When the time came Abraham Lincoln was ready for his great service to his country.

A Growing Institution

Not far from the nation's memorial to Abraham Lincoln, a great quality-famous store has been growing for years. The roots of Raleigh Haberdasher go deep into the foundations of community life, but our services and usefulness have an outward growth.

For many months an extensive expansion program has been in progress. Our new, enlarged Women's Fashion Floor has become one of the most beautiful in Washington. Women love the convenience of having dresses, coats, suits, furs, millinery, sportswear, toiletries and accessories assembled together on one floor. Our Men's Clothing Department has been breaking through walls, planning on a grand scale, to give more room to the nationally famous brands for which we're known. In every way—Raleigh pledges itself during these trying times to serve you and the community to the best of its ability.

Use of Rubber, Tin Further Restricted

Rationing Is Decreed For Retreaded Tires; Canned Beans Banned

treaded and recapped tires included two lists of "eligibles," the prospects of obtaining crude rubber for the second category were admitted by Henderson to be meager.

List "A," it was announced, contains substantially the same categories as are included in the list of eligibles for new tire purchases, with the addition of clergymen. List "B," consisting largely of "essential" passenger cars and those used by war workers, will receive "camelback"—the rubber compound used to form a new tread on worn tires—only if such camelback is available after List A needs have been met.

Even for the "comparatively few" who can qualify in List "B," there is no possibility of obtaining retreads for the rest of February and March, it was asserted flataly.

New Quotas Due

Beyond that, Henderson was almost as pessimistic. "It is possible, and even probable," he said, "that there will be no crude rubber available for retreading passenger car tires, except for those vehicles already elegible to buy new tires."

Local boards in each community, already charged with rationing new tires, will supervise the retread program. Quotas of new tires and retreaded truck-size tires for February will be announced within a day or so.

Henderson warned all persons who now have tires in the hands of retreading establishments to arrange either to have the work completed within a week, or to get the old "carcass" back before the existing tread has been buffed off. After February 19, Henderson warned, no retreaded tires can be obtained without a certificate, even though the work has been on order for some time.

No Small Cans

As contrasted with List A—the eligibles set up some weeks ago as permitted to buy new tires, and consisting mainly of essential trucks and buses, with only a few passenger vehicles of doctors, nurses, etc—list B is comprised principally of passenger cars. They include taxis, repair men's cars, and autos of executives, engineers and workers in power, transportation, communication, agricultural, extractive and industrial facilities "essential to the war effort." Also included are vehicles of Federal and local government officials in public health, safety and war work.

In issuing the order restricting canning, the WPB explained that last year 40,000 tons of tin were used in tin cans. The new restrictions are expected to save at least 15,000 tons.

General provisions call for the elimination of small size cans, no canning of soups, except condensed soup, after June 30, prohibitions against the canning of whole peaches, pears and apricots (in order to conserve space), and restrictions on the thickness of the plate in virtually all cans.

Four categories of canned goods were specified. The first, consisting of fruits and vegetables of "primary importance," can be provided with cans without limit. The second and third categories, fruits and vegetables of secondary importance, and essential medical, dental, chemical and industrial products, may have as much tinplate, in general, as was used in the 1940 pack.

Class four, consisting of everything else, may not be canned after the end of this month.

and now I am wiring Hollywood asking for his full-time services," Landis said.

Pointing out that developments in Singapore "may bring the battle front about 3000 miles nearer," the director declared:

"This office has got to be built up and geared to action.

"I am overhauling the functions of this office with two things in mind. First, every erson in the office must have a clear and definite function, and second, every person must be qualified for that function."

He said civilian defense must move rapidly into its training program and intensify all its efforts considerably, declaring practice tests and blackouts should be hastened as much as possible.

McNutt Cool to Miss Chaney

While terming story telling and community dancing "fine activities worthy of encouragement," Landis said he doubted "whether they are our activities."

At the office of Federal Security Administration Paul McNutt it was declared FSA expects to absorb the physical fitness activities of OCD into its recreational section, which has set up 200 recreational centers in war boom towns and in areas around military encampments.

The question, "Are you absorbing Mayris Chaney, too," brought the quick answer, "No—absolutely not."

Byrd to Study Personnel

Meantime, on Capitol Hill, Senator Byrd had been promised a complete copy of OCD personnel lists and said they would be studied tomorrow by the Joint Congressional Economy Committee. If an exorbitant number of employes is shown, an OCD investigation will be asked, he predicted.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, which now has before it the bill giving OCD 100 million dollars for equipment, did not discuss the office yesterday and said no OCD spokesmen were scheduled for today. However, Treasury witnesses will be heard by the committee today asking for a reinstatement of $80,000 with which to pay for a Donald Duck income tax film—slashed out by the House during irate speeches brought on by OCD "frills and furbelows."

oline as well. Studies made by the Rubber Manufacturers Association show that, with fuel consumption normal at 20 miles per hour, it is 11 per cent above normal at 40 miles per hour, 50 per cent at 60 and 126 per cent at 80 miles per hour.

Amid rising probabilities that gasoline rationing is around the corner, these figures can hardly be dismissed lightly. Not even if one chooses to ignore the fact that speeding is the No. 1 ingredient in the formula for traffic deaths.

Reporter Places Blame for Singapore

and equipment to meet it, Australia will be attacked in the very near future. I've talked with dozens of American bomber and fighter pilots in the Netherlands East Indies and others who got out of the Philippines. Every one of them said in just these words: 'For God's sake, tell them to send us some aircraft. In every engagement we're outnumbered 50 and 100 to 1.'

"At Singapore, the entire British, Australian and Indian garrison will either fight to the last man or surrender. I do not believe there will be a Dunkirk from Singapore. The imperial forces there will fight and die with great courage. They have that capacity and it has been the main weapon of the soldier in Malaya.

Reasons are Listed

"Here, in brief, are a few of the reasons why the Japanese are at Singapore:

"The British authorities were confident that the Japanese would not dare attack Great Britain. When the Japanese did attack they were so stunned and unprepared that the British, unless reinforced, at no time stood a chance of holding the Japanese advance despite the official statements to the contrary. The British troops were subjected from the first day of the war down to this moment to unceasing divebombing and machine-gunning attacks No courage in the world can stand that indefinitely.

"In the first month of the war the troops were without protection from British fighters.

"Only three weeks before the outbreak of the war did the British military discover that Bren gun carriers and small tanks could negotiate water-covered rice fields. That required a change in defensive tactics, which had been based on depending on jungles and rice fields to protect their flanks.

"The British were heavily outnumbered and unable to stop the Japanese infiltration attacks. The troops were not adequately trained for jungle fighting and could not adapt themselves in a few weeks. The British commanders judged what the Japanese would do by what they would do if in the Japanese position.

"An amazing Fifth Column organization had been established in Malaya. One officer said he gave the Fifth Columnists 35 per cent of the credit for the Japanese success. He declares the scorched-earth policy the first four weeks of the war was virtually a figment of the official imagination.

"Vast storehouses of food were left untouched for the Japanese, Sapans, boats, barges and even steamers were undamaged. At Penang, the British military authorities ordered the evacuation without consulting the government. They refused to evacuate anyone except Europeans. All Chinese, Malays and Indians were left to their fate.

"That was the beginning of considerable difficulties with the natives in Malaya.

"At Penang, the treasury was left intact with more than a quarter of a million dollars and when the Japanese walked into Penang they simply threw a switch in the radio station and began broadcasting.

"While it was stated that the British were destroying everything in the path of their retreat, facts told a different story. To give one instance, it was announced they destroyed everything at Juantan airdrome on the east coast. Two days later the R. A. F. was sent over to bomb the undamaged hangars and the Japanese aircraft already using the field.

"'Up until the days of the war the colonial administration was unable to distinguish between Japanese as potential enemies and the Chinese as allies. Prominent Chinese at the outbreak of the war beseeched the British to give them guns to help fight. A Chinese battalion was recruited ten days ago.

"At the time the authorities banned me from broadcasting through Singapore, the head of military intelligence said that civilian morale could win or lose the Battle of Singapore. Every American and British corespondent there affirmed that censorship in Singapore, did everything possible to hide the situation from those civilians expected to fight the battle for Singapore.

"The tragic story of Singapore is not all one of Japanese numerical superiority, fanatical courage and brilliant military scheming. The Japanese are at Singapore also because of what the British failed to foresee, prepare for and meet at the crucial moment. That's the moral of the story of Singapore."

result of the war effort.

McNutt explained that actually total unemployment coverage will be moved up from the 32,900,000 whose jobs are now insured, to 35 million by bringing in all those now protected by old-age pension insurance.

"Instead of saying this is a law to take care of displaced auto workers, you should say it's a law to give everybody who works a larger unemployment grant," commented Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio.

McNutt stressed that the bill was effective only through January 1, 1943. He called it "only a stop-gap measure to meet a crucial situation." Chairman Doughton said it would be difficult to get back to the former basis "after what we do in this act" but he thought emergency action was justified.

The two Administration witnesses were cross-examined by several Ways and Means committeemen who argued that the States had the funds and the machinery to carry displaced workers during the employment shift without the Federal Government stepping in.

Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, asked what large worker displacements are likely to occur outside the war-hit automobile and rubber industries.

"You can't tell where the lightning will strike next," McNutt replied. "A year ago I wouldn't have believed that Japan today would be in control of the Malaya Peninsula, but she is."

Before the committee was a compromise bill drawn by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, which authorized a 20 per cent increase by the Federal Government in weekly State benefits, with a 26-week guarantee, and barred any attempt at nationalization of State systems.

McNutt and Hill complained that this increase was insufficient, as some 30 States pay a maximum of only $15 and an average of far less. In only three States, paying a maximum of $20, would the 20 per cent increase bring benefits to the $24 level recommended by the President as necessary to hold, retrain or finance the defense migration of certain workers, they contended.

Compromise Bill Offered

Fears openly expressed by Doughton that the Administration was seeking through its original bill to make a start toward a uniform system of unemployment compensation were met by repeated denials from McNutt.

Nothing to Do With Bill

"Do you favor a uniform system," asked Representative West (Democrat), of Texas?

"I do," said McNutt.

"Do you favor an increase in old age benefits?" asked West.

"I do," replied McNutt.

He said he likewise favored Federal accident protection and Federal aid to education, but those had nothing to do with the pending bill—"there is nothing sinister or diabolical in this act."

Disney quoted the Governor of Michigan as saying that State could increase its unemployment benefits 20 per cent to handle automobile job displacements and still have 115 million dollars left in its unemployment reserve. McNutt said that while the Michigan Legislature might act in special session to afford some relief only a few of the other State Legislatures would be called and the emergency was acute.

Several times Representative Crowther (Republican), of New York, impatiently exhorted the committee to action. During examination of Hillman, Crowther called it "tragic to be bandying words when we are losing the war every day."

Hillman preceded McNutt before the committee, testifying that "only by supplementing present unemployment compensation machinery could the Government hope to keep skilled workers for necessary production."

Japs Now Menace Last Oil Supplies

Loss of Dutch Indies Would Be Severe Blow to Allies as Australia Has None

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

A serious oil problem will confront the United Nations if they lose the Netherlands East Indies and have to fall back on Australia, it was pointed out here yesterday.

That Japan, which must import three-fourths of her oil, would gain an enormous advantage if she captured Queen Wilhelmina's rich islands, has long been apparent.

But Dutch experts here turned the coin around yesterday and showed how the Allies themselves would be embarrassed for fuel if the islands fell and Australia became the last rampart in the South Pacific.

There are no other sources of oil in that part of the world. Australia has no oil wells, and it is not believed that she has a great deal of oil in storage.

Oil for the Allies' ships, planes and mechanized forces in Australia, the Dutch experts pointed out, would have to be hauled all the way from the American mainland or from the Near East. In either case, it would be a long and possibly a hazardous journey.

Then, too, there is the question of tankers. The United Nations have none too many of them, and both German and Japanese submarines have marked tankers as a special prey since December 7.

Oil Is Big Prize

There is much in the famed "Spice Islands" that Japan wants, but oil is the big prize. According to a recent statement by Donald Tyerman, editor of the London Economist, the Nethelands East Indies, together with British Borneo and Sarawack, produced about 8½ million tons of oil a year—"all that the Japanese want in quantity and three-quarters of what Germany herself has to get along with in Europe.

The island of Sumatra, just across from Singapore, produces 4½ million tons a year. Java a million. Dutch Borneo another million, Tarakan Island about 750,000 tons and British Borneo and Sarawak about a million.

The Japanese already have Borneo and Tarakan. True, the oil wells were destroyed—more thoroughly by the Dutch than by the British—but it is recognized that the invaders will be able to drill new wells long before they are likely to be in desperate need of fuel.

Whole Area Endangered

In Dutch circles here, it was said yesterday that with the fall of Singapore the whole Netherlands archipelago would be in the gravest danger. This archipelago, with its population of 70 million—nearly equal to Japan's own population—is about as long as the airline distance from San Francisco to Bermuda, or about 3500 miles.

But dark as the picture appeared, the "indomitable Dutch" insisted that it was not hopeless. They conceded that Sumatra, because of its proximity to Singapore, would be difficult to hold. They pointed out, however, that Dutch strategists had always expected that Java would be the main stronghold.

The Netherlands Indies had an army of 100,000 men at the time the Germans invaded the mother country on May 10, 1940. No figures on the Indies army have been made public since then, but it is no secret that the army has been substantially increased in size.

Vice Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, commander in chief of the naval forces, who yesterday took over from Admiral Thomas Hart as the seagoing member of the supreme command, had at the start of the war 5 cruisers, 8 destroyers, 20 submarines and a force of torpedo boats and auxiliaries.

Same Old Weakness

The weakness of the Netherlands force is the same weakness that has cursed all the foes of the Axis powers from the beginning—a shortage of planes. The Dutch have been trying desperately for four years to build up their air force by purchases in the United States, but they could never buy as many planes as they wanted so long as the emphasis was on the fighting across the Atlantic.

American planes and pilots already have joined in the Battle of Java, but it is not believed that their number is very great as yet.

Besides planes, the Dutch need tanks and heavy artillery. Just as they have far more pilots than they have planes, so do they have many more tank crews than they have tanks.

The situation in the Netherlands Indies is best described by what has now become a melancholy cliche. It is a race against time. If the United States can get sufficient reinforcements to Java—and if possibly the British can get away from Singapore with some of their equipment—the Japanese tide might be halted.

The Japanese have had a better appreciation of that fact than many persons arrayed against them, and they are expected to waste no time in launching an all-out assault on Sumatra and Java.

Senators Back Neutrality Revision

Acting swiftly, the Senate passed and sent to the House today legislation suspending for the duration of the war a section of the Neutrality Act prohibiting American citizens from extending credit to agencies of belligerent governments, including United States Allies.

Chairman Connally (Democrat), of Texas, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which approved the measure by a 13 to 1 vote a few minutes earlier, explained that enactment of the resolution would facilitate the sale by American manufacturers of warplanes and other equipment in Canada.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, told the Senate he would not block immediate action because he had been assured by State Department officials and Connally that the measure would not "in any way militate against the enforcement of the so-called Johnson Act."

The Johnson Act prohibits loans to nations whose debts to the United States are in default.

Squirrel Hunter Guards Supply of New Cars

By Joseph M. Mathias

Since the automobile shortage threatened, Vienna (Va.) residents have seen a strange new "crop" on a 2-acre field of Howland Kenyon's farm near the town. It's a "crop" of shiny new automobiles—which, however, can't be "harvested" until OPA says so.

There are about 90 automobiles on the field, al surplus stock of the Kenyon-Peck Motor Co., in Arlington County, Va. Kenyon's son, Lawrence, is one of the owners of the motor firm.

Keeping close watch over the "crop," the most valuable ever seen on Farmer Kenyon's former cornfield, is John Bolden, Negro tenant, who is an expert squirrel hunter. There are also several hunting dogs on the premises just in case tire or auto thieves come around, Kenyon said.

The Arlington motor company, like others in the Washington area and throughout the country, accumulated surplus stock last fall when a curtailment, but not a complete stoppage, of automobile production was foreseen.

Robert Peck, co-owner of the Arlington firm, explained that retail dealers were advised to purchase surplus stock from the factories to tide them over 1942.

Since January 2 these stocks, stored in warehouses and vacant lots, have been "frozen" by order of the Office of Price Administration. Dealers, however, have been assured that before the end of 1942 they will be permitted to sell under a rationing plan all the stock on hand prior to January 1.

Details of the rationing plan are now being worked out by OPA. The plan will become effective about February 23.

Australia Will Be Last Bastion in South Pacific

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The imminent fall of Singapore was described in military quarters here yesterday as a blow of terrible consequences for the Allies—a disaster which would add at least an extra year to the long Pacific war.

Singapore's defeat makes a successful defense of the Dutch East Indies highly problematical, according to this informed opinion, and probably means that the United Nations must fall back eventually on Australia as their main bastion between Hawaii and India.

Moreover, all the strategic advantages lost—whether at Singapore or other key points, fallen or yet to fall—must be bought back some day slowly and painfully at great cost in blood and treasure.

The present grim situation might well have been averted, it was learned, had the Singapore garrison been able to hurl back all attacks on the fortress island for just about another month. By that time, it was understood, the British bastion probably would have received ample reinforcements to hold out indefinitely.

If the United Nations had been able to gain that much time to concentrate air power in the East Indies, it would have been a relatively simple matter to strengthen Singapore not only in the air but on the ground.

As long as Singapore was securely in allied hands, the Japanese were prevented from using elsewhere the forces committed to the Malay Peninsula campaign. That was one of the two main strategic reasons for continuing to defend the British fortress even after its value as a naval base had been virtually destroyed some weeks ago.

The other reason was that Singapore was needed as a base for offensive operations of the future. Once its naval power had been restored, it could have been used both in hacking at Japan's supply lines and as Britain's bridgehead in the entire Western Pacific area.

Now if it is ever to be so used it will have to be recaptured at great cost because—so experts here say—Japan may well be able to defend it with more manpower than Britain has been able to concentrate there.

The manpower now released to the Japanese for attack in other theaters may be used, as authorities here view the possibilities, either in stepping up the drive aimed at the Burma Road into China, in expanding the campaign against the Dutch East Indies, or in increasing the odds against Gen. Douglas MacArthur's valiant forces in the Philippines.

The Indies campaign appeared the most likely, for only the narrow Malacca Strait now separates the troops on the Malay Peninsula from the Dutch Island of Sumatra.

Attacks on the main chain of the Indies through Borneo and Celebes Islands already are underway. The full fury of the assault may now develop rapidly.

There is some hope that the defenders of the Indies may be benefitted by the reinforcements originally destined for Singapore. The fortress, however, was but a single defense point while the Indies lie open to invasion along uncounted leagues of coast.

Experts here agree that it will be a tough fight for the Indies, whose army and navy thus far have made a splendid record for themselves against heavy odds. But the uncertainty of the outcome was indicated by reports from Wellington that naval reinforcements are being moved, so far as is known, not into Indies waters but to the far distant waters of New Zealand and Australia, where a new command was established last week under Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary of the United States Navy.

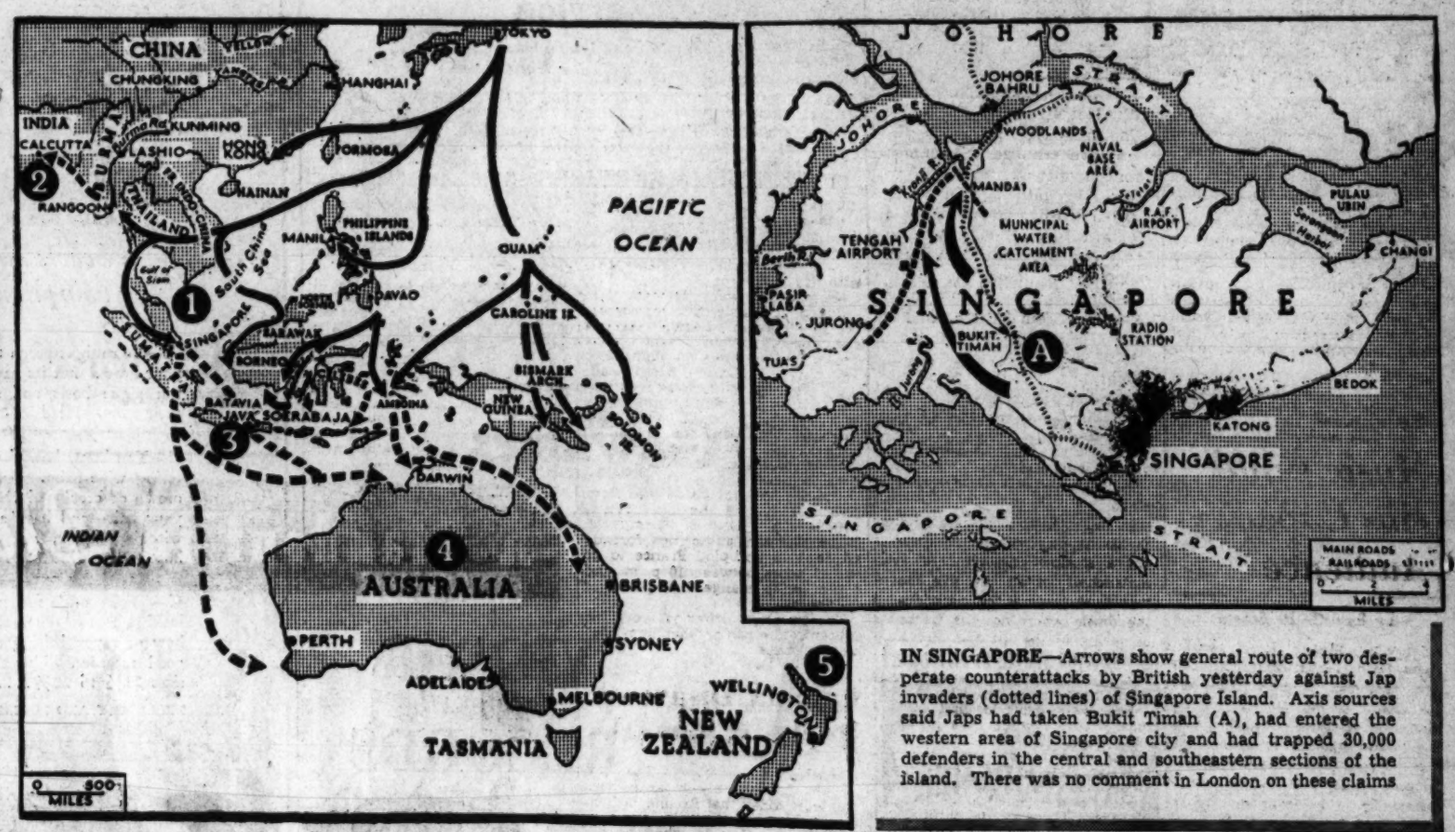
Embattled Singapore Is Rolling Country

Singapore Island, where British troops are battling Japanese invaders, is only a little larger than Guam. A bulletin from the National Geographic Society points out that Britain's island off Malaya is about 217 square miles in area, compared with 206 square miles for Guam. It is an irregular oval in shape, some 26 miles long by 13 miles across at its widest point.

Unlike the thick jungle and mountainous terrain of much of the Malay Peninsula, Singapore Island has few natural defense positions," the bulletin continues. "A green and rolling country with a few rounded hills, its highest elevation is the interior Bukit Timah (Tin Hill), which is only 530 feet high. Other hills worthy of the name are found mostly along the southwest and south-central shores of the island.

"The leading Japanese objective—Singapore city and port—lies a little east of center on the southern coast of the island. Its position makes it a focal point for Japanese forces reported advancing from established footholds along the western, northern and eastern shores. A network of roads and a cross-island railway run southward from Johore Strait and converge at Singapore.

"In the summer of 1940, the population of Singapore Island was estimated at more than 750,000.



SWOOP TOWARD THE INDIES—Fall of Singapore (1) will add at least an extra year to a long Pacific war, military experts here said yesterday. A Japanese commentator noted that its fall would release troops for a drive through Burma (2) to connect with a projected Axis drive east through India. Fall of the British bastion will be the signal for a swoop to take the rich Netherlands East Indies (3) and would leave Australia (4) as the sole United Nations' stronghold in the South Pacific between Hawaii and India. A convoy route base at Wellington, New Zealand (5), guarded by the United States Navy, has been successfully established. Broken arrows show possible Japanese extension of drives

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

IN SINGAPORE—Arrows show general route of two desperate counterattacks by British yesterday against Jap invaders (dotted lines) of Singapore Island. Axis sources said Japs had taken Bukit Timah (A), had entered the western area of Singapore city and had trapped 30,000 defenders in the central and southeastern sections of the island. There was no comment in London on these claims

The Frugal 'Nips'

Small but Tough, Japs Are Fanatical Warriors

The average Japanese soldier is 5 feet 3 inches tall—5 inches shorter than the average American selectee—and weighs 117 pounds—quite small by American standards, 27 pounds less than the American. But he is as tough as the proverbial boot, thoroughly trained and inured to hardship.

He is brave almost to the point of fanaticism, it having been hammered into his consciousness all his life that the destruction of an enemy of his country is more valuable than his own life.

He is intelligent and of higher average education than the average American. The percentage of illiteracy, for example, among Japanese conscripts is considerably less than 1 per cent. In 1938 it was 0.32 per cent. The average for all Americans is around 4 per cent (4.2 per cent in 1930.)

Farm boys lead the list of Japanese conscripts, with 31.1 per cent of the whole. Industrial workers are a very close second, with commercial workers a poor third—just as in the United States.

Conscription began in Japan in 646 A. D., and the modern system has been in effect since 1872. In peacetime the conscript serves two years and then is a reservist for many years. The United States first instituted peacetime conscription in 1940.

Since Japan has been at war with China for more than four years, the vast majority of Japanese soldiers today not only have been in the army more than two years but are veterans of hard, active service as well.

Great emphasis is laid on morale in Japanese military training and morale is very high. Military service is a high honor, even in peacetime. An old Japanese proverb much quoted is:

"Hana wa sakura ni, hito wa bushi," which translated freely, means: "The cherry is the first among flowers, as the warrior is first among men."

Another Japanese saying cherished by soldiers is that death in action is as beautiful as the short life of the cherry blossom.

Great attention is paid to the "spiritual training" of the Japanese recruit, in which these two proverbs are used often. The recruit is taught to look upon his corporal as his elder brother, his sergeant as his mother and his commander as his father. These officers are taught this same precept. Consequently discipline is excellent and the morale of the Japanese fighting man—naturally patriotic and with a deep love of country—is second to none.

The Japanese soldier is taught to take pride in endurance, frugal living and a spartan regime generally. He thrives on a minimum of food and bodily comforts—for which his officers set the example.

'The Best Defense Is Offense'

New Allied Naval Chief Fulfills a Prophecy

By Truid McCullough
Wide World Staff Writer

In 1918 a ranking Dutch officer-instructor at the Navy High College, in The Hague, said, "If war comes to Holland next time the world is set afire, I hope it comes before 1942, because Helfrich and Furstner will be admirals."

Twenty-two years later Vice Admiral Conrad Emil Lambert Helfrich was commander in chief of the Netherlands East Indies navy and yesterday took command of the United Nations naval forces in the Far East. Seven days before that prophesied war struck in the Pacific he issued an order to his fleet which justified that faith.

While Cordell Hull and Japanese envoys still were negotiating in Washington to prolong peace, Admiral Helfrich sent his navy out to sea. Twenty-four hours after the United States Fleet had been caught at Pearl Harbor a roving Dutch submarine nosed into the shallows off the Malayan coast and sank four Japanese transports.

In the 54 days following that first Dutch offensive action, Admiral Helfrich's ships and seamen in conjunction with the N. E. I. air force sank and damaged 54 Japanese ships.

Long before he became the youngest admiral in Dutch naval history, Helfrich personally and professionally exchanged opinions with strategists in the other armed services.

And always he was willing to listen. No opinion appeared too humble for Helfrich to hear, none too authoritative for him to challenge.

"He listens; if he disagrees he gives you a few brief counterarguments," said one of his submarine commanders, "and you are lost."

For all his listening, Helfrich is not a silent man. Jovial and gregarious, he could be found during the late afternoons of peacetime cocktailing with friends at Batavia's swank Harmonie Club. "Ah, the Harmonie Club," say transient Dutchmen with the same vocal lilt with which Frenchmen add "Oh La La" to "Ah Paree."

There, swapping stories from his great fund of jokes, he remained until time for the evening walk to his home.

Short and rotund, Admiral Helfrich got his chief exercise in walking. On Sundays he rounded up his family—his wife, two young sons, two daughters—and walked them around the outskirts of Batavia. Occasionally before the war he took a sailor's holiday cruising about the island in his official yacht and told his sons, just approaching their teens, of the days when he won the Holland Regatta on the Zuider Zee.

But even as his gregariousness belied the fact that very few men really knew him—many of his own commanders do not know his first name—his calm, unruffled leisure belied the apprenhension and anticipation with which he watched and prepared as Japan crept southward on Asia's coast.

In 1938 Helfrich and his partner in prophecy, Vice Admiral J. T. Furstner, recently appointed in London as minister of naval affairs (a job that, by comparison, combines the duties of Secretary Knox and Admiral King) began to draw up the plans which today are defending the Indies. In May of that same year, two years before Germany overran the mother country, they instituted a twice daily air patrol of the islands.

Again and again Admiral Helfrich requested more money for defense of the Indies. Just before Holland was invaded, he won authorization for the Netherlands' first capital ships.

The fact that their keels never were laid brought no lasting pain to the admiral. He confidently looked to his five cruisers, eight destroyers, some 20 submarines, small fleet of torpedo boats and auxiliaries. His islands, he knew, were best defended by smaller, speedier craft that could dart through the phosphorescent water of the Macassar Straits, creep into the shallows off the coast of the South China Sea. Always he hewed to this maxim: The best defense is offense.

No pigboat captain himself, Helfrich had been aboard submarines only as a passenger. From the day in 1907 that he sailed for the Indies on a three-year tour of duty, required for all new junior lieutenants, his first love has been destroyers; his second, cruisers. Of his 34 years of service, 20 have been spent in the Indies at two or four-year stretches.

Japs Cross Salween, Capture City Guarding Rangoon

British Admit Burma Plight Is Critical

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Feb. 11.—Strong Japanese forces have crossed the Salween River above Martaban after apparently seizing that strategic city protecting the approaches to Rangoon, the British high command acknowledged tonight.

The Japanese also were attempting to cross farther upstream at the east bank of City of Paan, and a communique said that "the situation, although critical, is believed to be in hand with our positions still intact."

[A United Press dispatch said the British turned back Jap invasion boats near Paan with a withering barrage of gunfire in an all-day battle.]

Still farther north near the juncture of the Thailand-Burma-Indo-Chinese frontiers, the communique said that Chinese troops going into action for the first time repulsed another invasion thrust. Thirty casualties were inflicted and some ammunition abandoned by the invaders, identified as Thailanders, at that point, it was said.

Lifting the curtain on the Martaban conflict at the mouth of the Salween, the British said heavy casualties were inflicted on the Japanese in the hills east and west of the city, "but Martaban itself now is believed to be in enemy hands."

The communique locating the crossings clearly revealed the serious plight of the British defenders of the lower railway which curves around the Gulf of Martaban toward Rangoon, this vital Burma Road port. By airline this capital is only 80 miles from Martaban; by railway it is about 140 miles.

Seizure of Martaban imperiled all the British troops operating between there and the first rail station to the north, Thaaton, which has been heavily bombed by the Japanese.

The crossing above that city put the Japanese in position to begin a circuitous overland march on Rangon which receives the precious American lend-lease equipment for shipment to China.

Both British and Japanese bombers were active over the vast tropical forest area, the Japanese concentrating their dive-bombers in the Salween area to cover the crossing of their troops.

The first Chinese action apparently occurred in the border area of northern Thailand where British bombers were reported to have attacked Japanese concentrations at Chiengrai.

Meantime, British planes pounded Jap positions in the Martaban sector (B)

3 Frenchmen Shot as Bombs Rattle Paris

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Feb. 11.—Three Frenchmen were shot in Paris today on the order of the German commander after a new outburst of bombing directed at conqueror and collaborationist alike.

The victims were listed as Robert Alcoulombre and Roger Yabbes, accused of "activity favoring the enemy as the result of de Gaullist agitation," and Andre Durand, condemned for espionage.

Four different explosions were reported: One in the German officers' mess in the university city at the south edge of Paris, where a bomb blew up in the very room where officers were eating; the other three blasts at various headquarters of the "social revolutionary movement," an extreme right organization favoring greater collaboration with the conquerors.

No casualties were reported.

Eugene Deloncle, head of the so-called "Foreign Legion Against Bolshevism," which sent some French legionnaires to fight with Germans on the Eastern Front, heads the "social revolutionary" formation. It is one of four groups which make up what is known as the Paris opposition to Vichy, or, which, in other words, are dissatisfied with Vichy's measures of collaboration with Germany.

The day brought also to the occupied zone one of the most drastic anti-Semitic measures yet imposed.

The German authorities forbade all Jews in occupied France to go out of doors between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m. or to change their places of residence.

The penalties provided were the concentration camp, other imprisonment or fines.

Canada Disavows Hepburn Remarks

Ottawa, Feb. 11 (AP).—The Dominion government announced pointedly today that Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario was not speaking for Canada when he declared in a political campaign speech in behalf of a subsequently defeated candidate that the United States Navy "is in hiding."

The provincial premier's references to the American Navy passed almost unnoticed when he was campaigning last week in the Welland by-election with characteristic attacks on the Dominion government of Prime Minister MacKenzie King, but Hepburn's speech was given prominence yesterday when it was called to President Roosevelt's attention at a Washington press conference.

Japs Mop Up In Singapore, Tokyo Claims

Tokyo, Feb. 11 (Radiocast Recorded by U. P., New York).—Japanese troops are driving the British defenders through the streets of Singapore in fierce, hand-to-hand combat, press dispatches from the doomed city asserted tonight.

The Japanese were mopping up resistance wherever it was found as they pressed into densely populated areas, with the crackle of machine-gun and rifle fire unceasing.

British vessels at anchor in the harbor of Singapore, preparing to evacuate the defenders in an East Asia Dunkirk, were blasted by Japanese bombers with deadly accuracy, dispatches said.

While dive-bombers attacked British warships, disabling one of 3000 tons, other planes caused considerable damage to the railway station near the commercial port. There was fierce bombing of enemy positions on Panjang Hill, along the railway in the center of the island.

As the attackers edged farther into the city, other Japanese troops and mechanized forces continued to pour across the repaired causeway from Johore.

The Rising Sun flag flew high over many points between Singapore city and the northern coast of the island, including the swank clubhouse and paddocks of the race track east of Timah Hill, highest point of the island, which itself was in Japanese hands.

The army section of the imperial headquarters formally announced at 8:20 p. m. that Japanese forces had entered the city area at 8 a. m. today (6 a. m. Wednesday Singapore time or 7 p. m. Tuesday Washington time.)

FBI Arrests 39 Enemy Aliens In Monterey Area

Salinas, Calif., Feb. 11 (AP).—The FBI, concluding for the present its counterespionage activity among Japanese of the Monterey Bay district, loaded 39 enemy aliens into a bus tonight and headed them for San Francisco and possible internment.

The prisoners, from whom great stores of contraband were confiscated, are suspected as potential Fifth Columnists or saboteurs.

Not until late today, after some 30 hours of continuous raids and seizures, did the FBI feel satisfied that the enemy alien situation in this area was under control. Even then Agent Nat Pieper, chief of the San Francisco division, said that investigations and questionings would continue, although no further arrests were in immediate prospect.

Sidelights on the War

Oil Companies Admit Cutting Octane Content of Gasoline

Cleveland, Feb. 11 (AP).—If your automobile motor has developed an unusual knock, blame it on the war. All oil companies have quietly reduced the octane content of their gasolines.

Premium grades, which formerly ran about 80 octane, have been reduced to 78 and in some case 76. Regular grades, which were about 75 octane, are down to 72 and 70.

The changes were made at the request of the Federal petroleum coordinator because of increased war needs for 100 octane aviation gasoline and because of a shortage of lead.

Well Done, Men

London, Feb. 11 (AP).—The British admiralty disclosed today that the crew of the 6500-ton British tanker Tahchee had brought their precious one million dollar cargo of oil safely into port after the ship was torpedoed in the Atlantic.

The crew abandoned ship after the torpedoing but, when the Tahchee failed to sink, reboarded her. They put out the fire, repaired the engines and, with the help of the Canadian corvette Orillia, brought the Tahchee home.

Writer of War Ditty Dies

Brighton, England, Feb. 11 (AP).—Felix Powell, composer of the World War I marching song, "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag," died last night of a gunshot wound suffered in a Home Guard headquarters.

An inquest was ordered into his death. No details of the shooting were divulged.

Powell, who was about 60, wrote the music and his brother, George, the words of what turned into one of the most popular songs of the last war.

They had thought their effort was a failure and left it forgotten in a drawer until a music firm offered a prize for a marching song.

"Pack Up Your Troubles" won the award and earned the brothers about £12,000 ($48,000 at current values) in royalties.

Bomb Protection

Orange, N. J., Feb. 11 (INS).—A novel wrinkle in defense plants was revealed tonight with announcement by the Monroe Calculating Machine Co. that a new addition to its factory will feature a 3-inch layer of moving water on its roof.

Water provided from driven wells will act as a safeguard against incendiary bombs, it was pointed out. The new plant is scheduled for completion July 1.

Ministers to Hear Post Church Editor

Music Guild Has Capacity Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents Egon Petri, pianist, and Paul Garrett, clarinetist, as guest artists with the Guild String Quartet (Frank Gittleson, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher) on Wednesday night in Almas Temple. Program: Clarinet Quintet in B minor, Op. 115 (Brahms), "Maerchen" in B flat minor and B minor, Op. 20 (Medtner), Preludes in G major and G minor (Rakhmaninov), Piano Quintet in F minor, Op. 34 (Brahms).

Attendance at the Chamber Music Guild, having grown this season since the transfer to Almas Temple, reached a capacity peak last evening when Egon Petri appeared as guest artist together with Paul Garrett. Proceeds for the future of the organization had a rosy glow at this final concert of a series which has been artistically as well as materially successful. Whether or not the presence of two distinguished musicians in collaboration with the string quartet was solely responsible for the throng, one would not venture to say, because the program was in itself a lure with two of Brahms' master works, the clarinet and piano quintets.

BROWN

Just as Anton Stadler was responsible for the existence of Mozart's clarinet quintet, so we are indebted to Richard Muehlfeld for the creation of the Brahms work for the same combination of instruments. Friendship and admiration of virtuosity were in both cases the incentives for composition. Muehlfeld, a self-taught clarinetist, was one of the greatest players of his time and a member of the splendid ducal orchestra at Meiningen, of which Buelow, Richard Strauss and Max Reger were successive conductors. It was expressly for him that Brahms wrote not only the quintet but also the clarinet trio and the two sonatas for clarinet and piano.

In this quintet one hears Brahms in his happiest mood, and there is not a shadow of sorrow or even melancholy in all the five movements. A pastoral feeling pervades the music which has the freshness of spring in the lilt and buoyancy of the themes. The lyric adagio is one of the loveliest passages that the composer ever penned.

Egon Petri made his first appearance of the evening in a group of solo pieces. For the first two his choice happily fell upon the unfamiliar B flat minor and B minor "Maerchen," or fairy tales which constitute the Opus 20 of Nikolai Medtner. These are delightful tonal fancies which seem to descend in direct line from the stories of Johann Musaeus and Ludwig Tieck. They combine narrative movement with poetic imagination, and pianists in search of unhackneyed material will find that Medtner composed 31 of them.

In the group, Medtner was coupled with Rakhmaninov, whose G major and G minor preludes were played with captivating spirit and technical ease. Naturally Mr. Petri was recalled persistently in the hope that he would play extra numbers, and he generously did so to the extent of a Chopin nocturne and waltz, and Liszt's version of the "Spinnchor" from "Die fliegende Hollaender."

It goes without saying that Mr. Petri was a tower of strength in the fine performance of the Brahms piano quintet. He is one of our ablest exponents of chamber music because of his inspiriting vitality, his surety at the keyboard and his keen perception of the relative values of dynamics.

Child Placement

The District's foster-care agencies have declared themselves prepared to take care of the job which would be theirs when untrained persons are forbidden to place District children for adoption. This is the object of the "baby broker" bill, and it is to be hoped that the Senate will speed its passage. If the bill becomes law, unscrupulous or ignorant persons will be disqualified from placing children by standards set up by an appointed committee. But the effect of the bill is constructive as well as punitive in seeing that proper agencies undertake this task. Mothers will thus be guarded against yielding to pressure in giving up children, those born in the District will not lose their identities, and case histories of children and adopting parents will be properly investigated before a child is given in adoption.

Admiral Helfrich

Appointment of a Dutch admiral to command the Allied naval forces in the Far East seems such an eminently sensible move that the wonder is that it was not made before. From the very start of the war it was evident that the Japanese were heading for the Dutch East Indies as fast as they could get there. It was evident, moreover, that bitter naval action would take place in the narrow waters of the Southwest Pacific. And it was also evident that none of the Allies knew those waters like the Dutch, who for years had practiced repelling Japanese naval thrusts at the Indies. If, at the beginning of the war, there was any doubt about the soundness of Dutch naval strategy, it was soon dispelled by the magnificent performance of the units commanded by Admiral Helfrich. Whatever were the considerations against making a Dutch naval officer commander of the Allied forces, they seem now to have been overruled. For with Admiral Hart's relinquishing supreme naval command, his responsibilities now pass to the younger Admiral Helfrich.

It is pointless to try to estimate whether it would have made any difference to the Allied position had Admiral Helfrich received his new appointment before the Japanese succeeded in driving so far southward. Certainly the effectiveness of such Allied naval units as have been available has been reflected in Japanese shipping losses, particularly in the Strait of Macassar. All of which does credit to the fighting initiative of Admiral Hart. But with the imminent fall of Singapore, the war by sea and by land will be brought to the very shores of the East Indies. Japanese landings will be attempted. And it will be the particular job of the Allied naval commander to thwart such landings and to destroy Japanese sea-borne support. For this task tough-minded Admiral Helfrich, with his encyclopedic knowledge of the Indies, is best qualified.

New Type

For some months past it has been perfectly clear that unless some way is found to step up the training of pilots in sufficient numbers this country's air program will fall dangerously short. To be sure, training facilities have been greatly expanded and instruction periods shortened. But military authorities have been frank to admit the urgent need of many more fliers than have been available. Of special interest, therefore, is the Navy Department's announcement that four large universities are to be leased for the duration to help turn out some 30,000 Navy pilots a year. The names of the universities have not been revealed, yet it is known that the Navy venture will get under way before May and that training applications are already being accepted.

Secretary Knox has expressed the Navy's laudable ambition to develop the finest airmen in the world. And it may be that the rigorous selective process set up for those who attend the four universities of the air will help achieve the desired objective. At any rate, it seems certain that out of such mass specialization there will emerge a new type of youth, trained to think and act primarily as airmen, not as earthbound mortals. Already there has been considerable progress toward this end as the inevitable by-product of our increasing use of the air. And it is only logical to suppose that the addition of a new dimension to living will eventually have its effect on the youth of the Nation.

Lincoln

Words such as Lincoln wrote seem to glow from year to year with the luster of almost apostolic inspiration. No man ever wrote more nobly. Yet great as were his simple but cadenced phrases, they are not what make the dead Lincoln a living presence. What makes Lincoln dwell in our hearts and minds are his life and his example. There was about the life of Lincoln a pattern which makes him familiar to our individual experience in spite of the lofty role which he shouldered.

On his previous anniversary we made the point that the Nation felt at one with Lincoln because of the perplexities which our people shared with him in a similar time of uncertainty. Lincoln resolved his own unsureness in the fires of deep and searching meditation. He sought the truth with painful slowness and almost majestic calm. There was in him a "deep gentleness of soul," in Lord Halifax's words, which did not permit of ready-made opinions and hot convictions. Somebody has written that Lincoln had to believe he was right, that he had truth and justice with him, or he was a weak man. But when he had found the truth, he became a rock of sureness which admitted of no compromise and which made him a mighty guide to the fainthearted. No man could then be stronger. Events, not excogitation and debate, have shown a course to this Nation in its individual and national life. The bell has tolled, but it took an external force to do the tolling. So the doubts of yesteryear have vanished. We therefore look back to Lincoln today as the man of action imbued with the strength of ten after his way had been charted.

The key to Lincoln's strength was his singleness of purpose. His purpose was that at all costs the Union must be saved. That is the message that across the span of years Lincoln brings today into every American home. He himself would have seen our present mission in the wider context of our Union with the free world. America to him was the "last best hope on earth." But earth itself is now riven, and America as so much a part of it is called upon to help set the very earth aright as the only way of saving itself. That can be done under the same banner that inspired Lincoln—the banner of the Declaration of Independence, which Lincoln called the "hope to all the world for all future time."

It is the quality as well as the hardness of Lincoln's strength that we would do well to contemplate. His strength had faith in it. "Let us not be oversanguine of a speedy final triumph," he wrote, in words of singular application to our situation today. "Let us be quite sober. Let us diligently apply the means, never doubting that a just God, in his own good time, will give us the rightful result." Lord Halifax in his Springfield speech yesterday claimed Lincoln for the world of humanity. Americans will not begrudge their Lincoln. What he did for his country is what we now have to do for our world, and there can be no doubt of the issue if Lincoln be our model.

Convincing Vichy

Whenever things look particularly bad for the Allies, the State Department has to get busy about Vichy. For Allied reverses are a kind of tonic to Vichy's collaborationists. The grimmer the Allied outlook, the more persuasive the arguments of the collaborationists for all-out cooperation with the Axis. In this circumstance it is perfectly easy to understand why Franco-American relations are again up for review.

The stunning victories of the Japanese and the relentless advance of the Germans in Libya have, as expected, given the collaborationists their head. Admiral Darlan, who has clearly identified his future with Germany's, has been able to push through army reforms retiring some 47 French generals and assuring their replacement by men who are politically more acceptable. Some French missions abroad are apparently undergoing a house cleaning of personnel who are known to be anti-Nazi. Besides such administrative reshuffling, the British have come forward with the direct accusation that French supplies have been sent to the Axis forces in Libya. And now there are reports that the Vichy Governor of Indo-China is negotiating with the Japanese to turn over French ships there for use against the Allies. Obviously, now, if ever, is the time for the State Department to get busy about Vichy.

Yet the weakness of the American position is painfully apparent. Naturally, we don't want France actively in the war on the side of the Axis. So we continue to bring what pressure we can to bear on Vichy. Among other things, we can make it very clear that aiding the Axis will range France on the side of this country's enemies. We can threaten to withhold supplies from French North Africa—which is what the British have been urging. We can make stirring spiritual appeals to the French not to disrupt a century and a half of amicable relations. Finally, we can say quite frankly: if you help the Axis, and the Allies win, your role in the postwar reconstruction will be that of a second-rate power. But if you help the Axis and the Axis wins, you will be nothing more than one of many satellites of a conqueror who, you must know, despises you even now.

On paper such reasoning carries a certain conviction. But to the French it must surely appear limited by the imponderable: will the Allies win? We know we shall win eventually—but the French don't know it. And they won't know it until the Allies can roll up a string of victories of such impressive dimensions that the collaborationist urge will collapse like an empty sack. It is tragic that our negotiations with France must be conducted on this plane. But to expect the State Department to act on any other assumption would be to misgauge the realties of the situation.

Farm Bloc

With persistence worthy of a better cause the Senate farm bloc has renewed the battle to boost farm prices to higher levels. Its latest move takes the form of a bill unanimously approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee which would forbid the sale of Government stocks of cotton, wheat, corn and other products at less than parity levels. The bill would also prohibit "sale or disposition" of any farm products transferred by the CCC to other Government agencies at prices below parity.

If this measure were to be enacted, Secretary Wickard would be deprived of the weapons which he now possesses to combat further sharp advances in wheat and corn prices. However, this latest move seems to be very much in the nature of a final expiring gesture of farm bloc defiance—one that is most unlikely to be successful. For when President Roosevelt signed the price-control bill he did so with the understanding that it placed no limitation upon the existing powers of Government agencies, such as the CCC, to sell agricultural commodities in the normal course of business.

At the same time he called attention to a statement made last August when he vetoed a bill providing for the freezing of Government-owned cotton and wheat stocks. "I pointed out," he said, "the extreme disadvantages of any action designed to peg prices through the arbitrary withholding of Government-owned stocks from the normal channels of trade and commerce." The President also "put another one over" on the farm bloc when he signed the price-control bill. He then authorized the CCC to transfer Government-owned cotton stocks to other Government agencies in "addition to quantities available for sale." By such means the existing legislative prohibitions upon the amount of cotton that may be sold within any given period have been circumvented.

Having laid down a program of this sort, the President would almost certainly veto any bill prohibiting sales at prices below parity of stored stocks of essential agricultural products. However, in view of the ambiguous phrasing of the Price-Control Act, the farm bloc may be doing the Administration a real service in forcing a showdown on the controversial provisions relating to such sales.

Mrs. Rice

Although Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, who died last Wednesday at Louisville, wrote a great many books besides "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," none of them approached to anything like its success. From the time of its publication in 1901 until about the time of the first World War, it remained an almost perennial best seller. Thus it affords an interesting example of the extent to which the popularity of a book is influenced by the prevalent atmosphere of the time in which it is produced. If "Mrs. Wiggs" had been written, say, about 30 years later, it would have met a far different reception, if, indeed, it could have found a publisher at all. It would have been denounced as a false, utterly sentimentalized picture of poverty drawn by an author who had never experienced or understood the crushing bitterness of the life she professed to describe. Mrs. Rice would have been accused of a transparent effort to ease the troubled bourgeois conscience for the conditions which a bourgeois-industrial society had created.

An earlier generation of readers, however, saw in the incorrigibly cheerful and the invincibly humorous spirit of Mrs. Wiggs the symbol of the superiority of the human spirit to any possible degree of adversity. It was an age of unbridled optimism, when even the optimism of a Mrs. Wiggs seemed plausible enough. By contrast, ours is an age of the profoundest pessimism. And even if Mrs. Wiggs could be transported from the cabbage patch to a background of great luxury, we should find her optimism not merely incredible but positively shameful. One day, possibly, it may be noticed that we have carried our pessimism to an even more absurd extreme than Mrs. Wiggs and her creator ever carried their old-fashioned optimism.

SONG

Although she sang throughout her life
Of more than eighty years,
She never found a song to match
Her rapture or her tears.
She never, never struck the chord—
She never learned the art
Of singing the ecstatic song
Which lay within her heart.

Letters To The Editor

Lindley's Defense

It is true journalism when an organ or publication such as The Post sees more than a one-sided picture of a grave situation that has an effect upon the morale of a nation during a time like this. The Post tries to be fair, honest and impartial in writing news and in writing editorials. This is, to my mind, the proper action of a great newspaper.

It is too bad that Ernest Lindley had to come forward with such a one-sided, feeble and irresponsible defense for this mess going on at the Office of Civilian Defense. Fortunately, the press in general has so enlightened the American public on that playhouse outfit of civilian defense that nothing Mr. Lindley can say can cover up the scandal of one of the most important agencies of the Federal Government. Is Mr. Lindley running to the defense of the OCD because his wife is one of those "parasites" in that outfit, drawing a big salary? It is downright disgusting to see such an exhibition.

Silly Season

The silly season is on us.

The Government yells for more help and brings thousands into Washington to crowd streets, restaurants and homes, but refuses jobs to Washingtonians who have homes here, merely because they are unfortunately natives of the Capital of the Nation we are trying to save.

The Patent Office, which does business with Washington attorneys, is moved out of town while WPB (OPM), which does business with out-of-towners, stays here and takes up more room than the Empire State Building has.

The President, from a 33-room mansion, and with great office accommodations separate, calls on Washington residents to move out of town, to save room.

A Congressman urges the deprivation of female citizens' rights in order that we may better preserve the American way of life, which means the right to stay up as late as one wants to.

Hours are staggered so the 4:30 employes can get off the streets before the 5 o'clockers get on the streets, and then the 4:30 crowd has to work overtime so as to make it harder.

Express buses run behind local buses so they wont go too fast.

Milk Shed

Washington milk distributors are declaring that there is a shortage, and are raising the cry, "Increase the price, and that will fix everything."

By what system of reasoning, I wonder, is this conclusion reached?

Since last month, at the present price, the baby could have 3 pints daily, but with the proposed increased price and with said baby larger, must he do with less in the future?

The distributor's profits are increased, even if he handles the same amount of milk, and the producer gets about the same.

Now, to this writer, it seems plain that instead of increasing the price, the proper thing to do is to increase the size of the shed.

There are rivers of milk available to this market, and those who produce it are most deserving and would be greatly helped by being placed on a par with those who have long enjoyed monopolistic control of the milk situation.

Senators Glass, Davis, Guffy; Representatives Faddis, Cunningham, Dirksen, Secrest, Imhoof, VanZandt, Smith and others should have a round table over this matter and help their constituents get into this market and help the food situation in overcrowded Washington?

Mrs. Roosevelt

This is a letter I should like to write to the First Lady in reply to The Post article of February 9:

"Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

"Since my escape from South Carolina slavery and arrival in Washington to work under Civil Service for the United States Coast Guard I have heard much discussion of you. Until tonight when I read in The Washington Post under heading, 'Warning: First Lady hits at lethargy in Congress,' I was on the fence as to what to think of your interest in human welfare and the ultimate good for our country. Now I am convinced by the article that you can be plenty subtle and are to be depended upon for the common good.

"You are right; the people of the country not only are taking greater interest in what is going on in the world, but they are herding to take advantage of any opportunity to get free of the goad of petty tyrants whose political jobs as supervisors are used to exploit the breadwinners—poor people who were afraid in the past of losing jobs that dozens of others were waiting in line to take. No, Mrs. Roosevelt, these people who have been bullied beyond endurance are not going to tolerate a repetition of the boom and depression years. You are right; they are willing to work, but not as slaves of the past under political lords proprietors. They not only are demanding a fair deal, but these people are moving toward better grazing. If there is a stampede, God help Congress and 'politics.' It is a question whether Congress or the people need you, Mrs. Roosevelt, worse.

Peace With Honor

Since my mind began to comprehend the patterns of life, I have planned my life for existence in a world of peace. Slowly and inexorably the germ of war has traveled in epidemic proportion from country to country until the infection has tainted our shores. As an individual I have despised war and I have dreaded its arrival—as an individual who has lived in freedom I dread the implications of tyranny and bigotry more than the horrors of war. What is peace if it is peace without honor, peace without freedom, peace without the ability of intellectual creation and the ability of social progress? Peace is then (under conditions of a totalitarian world) merely a word void of all the idealistic connotations of democratic life.

So we shall and we must temporarily shelve our desires and ambitions of a peaceful world. Our minds shall not be emptied of the beautiful thoughts of peaceful construction in the world of tomorrow. Our efforts should be harnessed to the machine which will stem the epidemic of despotism and its accompanying instrument—WAR. When we have destroyed the agents of destruction, we shall labor together to build a better world and a better peace. Our labors shall not be used for white prestige or black prestige or yellow prestige or brown prestige in the world but for human prestige.

The inscription on the Liberty Bell will be heard throughout the world—"Proclaim ye Liberty throughout the land."

Liquor And Soldiers

While we have a common concern with the invaded countries of Europe and Asia in a world-wide struggle for liberty, we should not allow this vital interest to blind us to the fact that there are forces seeking to curtail our liberty at home. One of these forces is the prohibition movement, now beginning to take notice again for the first time since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

There is now pending in a Congressional committee a bill which would impose prohibition upon the military camps and cities adjacent to them. Behind this apparently modest proposal is a complete program to restore Nation-wide bone-dry prohibition.

In 1917 national prohibition was put over as a war measure notwithstanding the obvious need for liquor under some circumstances in the trenches. That was the preliminary maneuver for the eighteenth amendment, out of which developed the lawless riot of the racketeering and bootleg era.

Should we allow history to repeat itself? No bigger than a man's hand is the present cloud of the dry movement, which is now easily dispersable but which might expand to dangerous proportions if neglected.

Why do prohibitionists appear to be so blind to the fundamental laws of human nature? Experience has shown that any attempt to impose temperance by legislation must inevitably fail. They seem to be still laboring under the fallacy that they can manipulate human souls as easily as the chemist manipulates elements in the laboratory. The chemical world, however, is a world of inanimate matter amenable to the laws of mechanics, but the human world is a world of living souls amenable to the laws of God. By giving us the choice to obey or disobey His laws, He has endowed us with moral nature.

Is it not the height of irony to deprive our soliders of one of their constitutional rights and at the same time cheer them on to the fight for freedom everywhere?

Casualty Lists

In connection with the Post's February 9 editorial, "America Can Lose." I should like to suggest that you follow up your statement as to the necessity of mental hardening, by an inquiry into the reasons that American casualty lists are being withheld from the public. Surely nothing else could temper us so effectively as the publication of such lists.

It is very difficult for me to believe that such publication, if unaccompanied by data as to ship or station, could give aid to the enemy. Is it reasonable to believe that the Japanese who are causing the damage to personnel are unaware of its approximate extent? To withhold such information from the public is to express a lack of confidence in its courage, as well as to impose an unconstructive worry upon it.

I would be willing to lay you a bet that the reason for this policy lies not in necessity, but in the timidity of the official mind. I could go on and argue the stupidity of following the British example, so much criticized in that country, and so at variance with the reactions of Americans, but the recollection of the governmental mind's attitude toward news is too annoying to be put on paper.

I doubt if an inquiry by your paper would get anywhere, except that it would help those of us who are worrying about our friends, to work off steam.

The Post Impressionist

Snowbound: Modern Version

Have you ever been snowbound in a prairie village? One dark morning you peer from your window and see with relief that yesterday's blizzard is over. The swirling snow has come to rest, heaped softly over everything in sight. Here and there, as darkness thins from the sky, smoke wisps from chimneys and lights gleam in warm kitchens.

The town awakes slowly, as if still numb from the recent storm. The snowy streets tell the story. First the trail of the businessman along the middle of the streets, avoiding the drifted sidewalks, and all leading to Main Street, where a set of footprints branches off toward each shop door.

Next come the school children, their tracks making a crazy pattern as the small boys tumble over each other into drifts and scoop up handfuls of snow to pelt each other with. And, after the last school bell has rung, comes the daily pilgrimage downtown of the old men, the retired farmers, who love to sit in a warm corner and dispute the issues of the day.

All day the streets map the town's comings and goings. But outside the town snow bounds that map, it rings the town within itself. No traffic can get through, no train can come until the plow has arrived—and what a sight that will be, with the great hissing iron monster spewing steam and snow dozens of feet into the air.

When a little town is snowbound, it slows down, takes things easy. In the afternoon the men sit and talk in the stores, the housewives gather in hospitable kitchens to drink coffee. Farmers can't get to town. The mail doesn't come or go. Even the radio news seems to come from a far-distant world. A pleasant lethargy comes over everyone.

Pleasant, that is, unless you happen to want to go somewhere. Not long ago I had gone home for a weekend visit with my family, and found my stay prolonged by a genuine North Dakota blizzard. By Tuesday the storm was over, but we were completely cut off from the rest of the world. Even the telephone lines had succumbed to their heavy load of snow.

And that very afternoon I was supposed to appear at a hearing at the State capitol. The outcome of two years' work depended on that hearing, so I was in no mood to have the weather trifle with my plans. But there was nothing anyone could do about it.

The day dragged by as I alternately wailed and fumed. Then, just as I had concluded that modern civilization was a failure, the telephone rang. It was "Central," telling me I could get a call through now to my office in Bismarck, the State capital.

My elation was short-lived. My office told me the hearing could be postponed no later than the following afternoon. And there I was, 100 snow-piled miles away.

As I was about to hang up in despair, inspiration struck one of the men in the office. He was put on the phone.

"You know the man who's been giving me flying lessons? I just remembered that he has skis for his ship. Will you fly back if he comes out there for you?"

Would I fly! I'd have gone by carrier pigeon if someone could have arranged it.

"I'll get hold of him and call you back."

More suspense. Then the return call came. "Okay. He has to put the skis on the ship, so he can't get there until about 2 tomorrow. Be sure to mark the landing field for him."

Life was bearable again—and no doubt my family thought I was, too. Thanks to "Central" the news of my projected journey got around town, and in the morning several WPAers, whom the snow had put out of work, came around to volunteer their services. Let no man speak harshly of WPA shovels in my presence. By noon those men had dug open a mile of road, and had put up a big red signal flag at the end of the pasture which was to serve as a landing field.

Shortly before 2 o'clock, bundled as if for an Arctic expedition, and with equally suitable farewells following me, I drove off to the landing field. We had just reached it when we saw the plane, a red speck on the sky. It circled over us and sat down neatly on the snow, prompt as an airliner on schedule.

A dozen helpful hands hoisted me into the cabin, and in a moment we were in the air. As we flew over the familiar houses I could see all the people who had come to their doors to watch my escape from their prison of snow.

The town was soon gone, and we were surrounded by a lonely vastness of sky and snow. Here was none of the usual patchwork of fields and roads that the aerial traveler sees. Instead we were flying over a mysterious sea of motionless white billows. Every familiar landmark was hidden beneath a boreal mask.

An occasional farmstead breaking through the white earth mantle only seemed to emphasize the glacial loneliness that encircled us. But for the evidence of slow-rising smoke from farm chimneys, and paths broken from houses to barns, our entire visible world might have been without human life.

On we flew, the only movement in the landscape our own shadow, grotesquely distorted as it flitted over the slopes and crests of the silent sea below. Somehow I felt afraid, and at the same time elated—it seemed almost superhuman to be looking down on this unbounded expanse of trackless snow.

Then the spell of the snowbound prairie was broken as the lighted tower of the capitol loomed before us. In 10 minutes we had landed at the airport, and I was on my way to the hearing, hurriedly assembling my notes and reports.

Starlings And War

The starlings roost in a tree right at one of the important bus transfer stations. The planners who gave us war time evidently neglected to wake the starlings an hour earlier. It's very unpleasant. It's probably the first detail the planners ever overlooked.

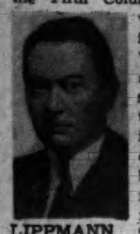
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Fifth Column On The Coast

SAN FRANCISCO.—The enemy alien problem on the Pacific Coast, or much more accurately the Fifth Column problem, is very serious and it is very special. What makes it so serious and so special is that the Pacific Coast is in imminent danger of a combined attack from within and from without. The danger is not, as it would be in the inland centers or perhaps even for the present on the Atlantic Coast, from sabotage alone. The peculiar danger of the Pacific Coast is in a Japanese raid accompanied by enemy action inside American territory.



LIPPMANN

This combination can be very formidable indeed. For while the striking power of Japan from the sea and air might not in itself be overwhelming at any one point just now, Japan could strike a blow which might do irreparable damage if it were accompanied by the kind of organized sabotage to which this part of the country is specially vulnerable.

This is a sober statement of the situation, in fact a report, based not on speculation but on what is known to have taken place and to be taking place in this area of the war. It is a fact that the Japanese navy has been reconnoitering the Pacific Coast more or less continually and for a considerable period of time, testing and feeling out the American defenses. It is a fact that communication takes place between the enemy at sea and enemy agents on land.

These are facts which we shall ignore or minimize at our peril. It is also a fact that since the outbreak of the Japanese war there has been no important sabotage on the Pacific Coast.

From what we know about Hawaii and about the Fifth Column in Europe this is not, as some have liked to think, a sign that there is nothing to be feared. It is a sign that the blow is well-organized and that it is held back until it can be struck with maximum effect.

IN PREPARING TO REPEL the attack the Army and Navy have all the responsibility but they are facing it with one hand tied down in Washington. I am sure I understand fully and appreciate thoroughly the unwillingness of Washington to adopt a policy of mass evacuation and mass internment of all those who are technically enemy aliens. But I submit that Washington is not defining the problem on the Pacific Coast correctly and that therefore it is raising insoluble issues unnecessarily and failing to deal with the practical issues promptly. No one ever can hope to get the right answer unless he first asks the right questions.

The official approach to the danger is through a series of unrealities. There is the assumption that it is a problem of "enemy aliens." As a matter of fact it is certainly also a problem of native-born American citizens. There is the assumption that a citizen may not be interfered with unless he has committed an overt act, or at least unless there is strong evidence that he is about to commit an overt act.

There is the assumption that if the rights of a citizen are abridged anywhere, they have been abridged everywhere. The effect of these assumptions has been to precipitate legalistic and ideological arguments between the military authorities out here and the civil authorities in Washington, and between the aroused citizenry of the coast and their fellow-countrymen in the interior.

A MUCH SIMPLER approach will, I believe, yield much more practical results. Forget for a moment all about enemy aliens, dual citizenship, naturalized citizens, native citizens of enemy alien parentage, and consider a warship in San Francisco harbor, an airplane plant in Los Angeles, a general's headquarters at Oshkosh, and an admiral's at Podunk. Then think of the lineal descendant, if there happened to be such a person, of George Washington, the father of his country, and consider what happens to Mr. Washington if he decides he would like to visit the warship, or take a walk in the airplane plant, or to drop in and photograph the general and the admiral in their quarters.

He is stopped by the sentry. He has to prove who he is. He has to prove that he has a good reason for doing what he wishes to do. He has to register, sign papers, and wear an identification button. Then perhaps, if he proves his case, he is escorted by an armed guard while he does his errand, and until he has been checked out of the place and his papers and his button have been returned. Have Mr. Washington's constitutional rights been abridged?

Has he been denied the dignity of the human person? Has his loyalty been impugned?

NOW IT SEEMS to me that this is in principle and in general the procedure which ought to be used for all persons in a zone which the military authorities regard as open to enemy attack. In that zone, as in the corridors of the general's headquarters or on the deck of the warship or within the gates of the airplane plant, everyone should be compelled to prove that he has a good reason for being there, and no one should be allowed to come and go until he has proved that his business is necessary and consistent with the national defense.

In the vital and vulnerable areas it should be the rule that residence, employment, communication by telephone, telegraph, automobile and railroad are confined to licensed persons who are fully identified and whose activities are fully known to the authorities and to their neighbors. The Pacific Coast is officially a combat zone: Some part of it may at any moment be a battlefield. Nobody's constitutional rights include the right to reside and do business on a battlefield. And nobody ought to be on a battlefield who has no good reason for being there. There is plenty of room elsewhere for him to exercise his rights.

THIS IS IN SUBSTANCE the system of policing which necessarily prevails in a war zone. By this system the constitutional and international questions about aliens and citizens do not arise at the very place where they confuse the issues and prevent the taking of thorough measures of security. Under this system all persons are in principle treated alike. As a matter of national policy there is no discrimination. But at the same time the authorities on the spot in the threatened region are able to act decisively, and let the explanations and the reparations come later.

This approach to the question by-passes the problem which, as I see it, has caused the trouble in Washington. For what Washington has been trying to find is a policy for dealing with all enemy aliens everywhere and all potential Fifth Columnists everywhere. Yet a policy which may be wise in most parts of the country may be extremely fool-hardy in a combat zone.

Therefore, much the best thing to do is to recognize the Western combat zone as territory quite different from the rest of the country, and then to set up in that zone a special regime. This has been done on the Bataan Peninsula, in Hawaii, in Alaska, in the Canal Zone. Why not also on the threatened West Coast of the United States?

Women In Wartime

By Col. Stanley Washburn

Influence On Morale

(Extracts from a paper appearing in the Public Opinion Quarterly).

GREAT IS the influence of women on morale. At this moment when all the world faces darkening days and civilization is menaced, it is most important that our country, with unknown shadows over its future, consider this subject. In thirty-five years of association with war and armies, it has become obvious to me that one of the most dominating factors in war or peace is the influence of women on morale.

In war, it is so important and far reaching in its effects that it is beyond my understanding why military books rarely mention it. As one goes up in the scale of civilization this influence becomes more and more potent. It is so universal that one may take it almost as an axiom in war that the morale of soldiers at the front never permanently reaches a higher level than the capacity of the women at home to undergo sacrifices, to believe in the cause and to suffer with fortitude. These attributes in women rest in a large degree upon the moral and spiritual lives of the women themselves.

WHEN I WRITE of women I do not want to build a case merely upon sentiment. It is true that I have sentiment myself, but as far as is humanly possible, I judge nothing in war from the point of view of emotion, but purely by conclusions drawn from what seems to me conclusive evidence. The history of the world, if one reads it dispassionately, is an unbroken record of the relation of women and morals to the ebb and flow of civilization. It is the women who have always set the standards that men live up to, and from which they draw their inspiration. Men do the talking, blustering and make the biggest noise in the world, but it is mostly for the effect it will have on some woman. The nations from the earliest written history, have gone forward or into decadence in the exact ratio in which men have placed women in their relations to themselves. Where women were chattels and prized for sex and childbearing only, the morale of the state has withered, atrophied and ultimately disappeared entirely. From Sodom and Gomorrah down through Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece and most definitely in the collapse of the Roman Empire, the same lesson has continuously repeated itself, until it seems inconceivable that the subject has never been emphasized in the study of war.

The highest morale is directly traceable to the nations where monogamy is a tradition. This is for a very simple reason. The basis of all nations that have permanently endured rests on the family group. While men and women, back in the stone age, were promiscuous and there was no family life, there was nothing, not even history. The definite fact is that there can be nothing permanent in the world unless there is consideration for the generation to follow. Unless there be responsible parenthood, the child has little or no chance to develop consistently in any way.

The Japanese, the most practical people in the world, were quick to see the danger of irresponsible sex relations. They did not secure results by preaching morals. They went to the root of the whole question by making every child whose parenthood could be proven, a legitimate heir and claimant for support on the estate of the father. Monogamy has long since become an institution in Japan, and the old system of concubines has vanished completely. The women of Japan have a phrase that I heard repeatedly in 1904-1905, "A war every ten years is good for our young men." It has been quoted so often that it is a part of their philosophy. I saw the first troops to leave Japan in that war, and never saw a woman weep. I never thought the spiritual conceptions of Japan, though powerful, were as potent as the precepts of Christianity. No religion ever raised the standards of women as has the straight and simple philosophy of the Great Nazarene.

THIS IS exemplified at present by the women of England from the Queen down. The Queen has been an inspiration to every other woman, and the women have imparted their determination and courage to the men.

The part played in our Civil War by women in the South, and by women in the North as well, is too fresh in mind to need more than a word. I speak of the North, but it was the women of the South that kept the war going for four years. Respected and beloved by all their men, they suffered, and encouraged them, accepted sacrifice with a smile, and were as marble in their courage and fortitude. They bore the burden of war in their homeland as the women of the North were never called upon to do in a similar manner.

Turkey's Leaders

By Maurice Feldman

Alert And Watching The War

IT IS a strange fact that the leading statesmen of Turkey were born on the seacoast—not one of them comes from the interior of the country, the real core of Anatolia. One is perhaps therefore justified in the assumption that the international life of the great seaports of Istanbul and Izmir, the constant association with neighboring peoples and the spiritual effect of such intermingling exercised a permanent influence on the development of that generation which fought with Kemal Atatuerk for freedom and independence and which is today, to a very large extent, responsible for the existence of the Turkish Republic.

Ismet Inoenue, the president of New Turkey, comes from a highly respected family of Izmir (formerly Smyrna) where his father served as judge on an important military tribunal. Born on September 24, 1884, Ismet was destined from birth for a military career and attended the school for cadets and officers. When only 19 years old, he had already been promoted to the rank of lieutenant of the field artillery. His unusual talents, great industry and keen perceptive faculty permitted him to advance rapidly through the various ranks so that at the age of 24, he became commander of the fourth army corps. During the war for independence he was Atatuerk's most influential assistant, and was put in charge of military operations in Asia Minor. It was he who in 1921 in the vicinity of the little city of Inoenue gained such a decisive victory. (When family names were introduced into Turkey, Atatuerk honored Ismet Pasha by conferring upon him the name of Inoenue). In the years marking Turkey's great internal development Inoenue served as foreign minister, and for more than a decade as prime minister.

AFTER ATATUERK'S death, the great national assembly elected him President of the republic on November 11, 1938, but together with this distinction came the grave task of continuing the policy established in broad strokes by the founder of New Turkey.

Inoenue's private life might serve as a model for every Turkish family. In his simple, irreproachable mode of living, he sets a good example to his fellow officials and his fellow countrymen. He seeks recreation in frequent rides in the neighborhood of Ankara and is usually accompanied on them by adjutants and a bodyguard.

Mme. Inoenue is an aristocrat of winning personality and great charm. She is greatly interested in the rising generation of young Turkish women and devotes a good deal of time and attention to them, but not at the expense of her three children, to whom she is an excellent mother.

A CLOSE AIDE and personal friend of the President is the prime minister, Dr. Refik Saydam. He was born in Constantinople in 1881 and studied medicine there. To complete and intensify his medical training he then betook himself to Germany and Austria. When, shortly following his return from abroad, the Balkans became restive, the Ottoman government promoted him to sanitation inspector of the army of the east, as it was then known. Since that time he has devoted himself primarily to problems of public health. In 1919, together with Mustafa Kemal, he undertook that memorable journey to Anatolia which laid the groundwork for the change in regime and which led ultimately to the creation of a somewhat small but internally unified Turkey. From 1921 until 1937 he served as minister of public health and, after Atatuerk's death, Inoenue named him prime minister on January 27, 1939.

Dr. Saydam, a bachelor, still lives in the small, unpretentious house on a cliff above the capital city of Ankara in which I visited him, then minister of health. Books are his great passion. On entering his library, one senses immediately that the numerous volumes and pamphlets in it serve no mere decorative purpose. The "doctor," as he is known everywhere, studies domestic and foreign papers diligently. In the small alcove adjoining the living room are great piles of them, which he reads in his free evening hours and consumes countless cups of coffee. While I spoke with him during one of my visits to the Turkish capital, he drank no less than 16 cups of Turkish coffee.

To his subordinates Dr. Refik Saydam appears as a severe but extremely polite and likeable person. While conversing with me, he employed his mother tongue and addressed me as "Dear Feldman," (it was explained to me later that this form of address was a special distinction). When in the course of the conversation the subject of Russia was brought up, he said: "Every country has 'natural' friends and 'natural' enemies. Surely, no special proof is needed that Russia is one of our 'natural' friends."

THE YOUNGEST of the political triumvirate is 53 year old Foreign Minister Shuenkrue Saracoglu. He, too, comes from the coast, from the vicinity of Izmir (Smyrna), where he was first a district official and then director of the trade school. Political science and national economy have been his hobbies since his youth. To supplement his knowledge of these sciences he registered at the University of Geneva as a student and remained there until 1918. After the outbreak of the revolution he returned to his native country. His oratorical ability soon brought him to the forefront of the propagandists of New Turkey and he was elected a representative of his home district of Izmir. In 1925, he became minister of education and in 1927 minister of finance. In the interests of Turkish economy and finance he visited France and the United States. The vast technological and industrial activities of the United States made a deep impression on him.

In 1933, in Paris, he signed an absolution of guilt of the Ottoman government. In the same year he was appointed minister of justice by Atatuerk. Since 1938 he holds the portfolio of foreign minister. He may be counted on as being very kindly disposed toward the United States and Great Britain. His connection with the Anglo-Saxon world, closer as it is than was that of his predecessor, Rudshi Aras, stands him in good stead today.

One can hardly call it coincidence that Saracoglu's favorite pastime is chess. One can find him playing on Sundays with his brother or friends who come to visit him in his official residence, a magnificent palace situated in the center of the government buildings. Madame Saracoglu once had the reputation of being the most beautiful girl in the Orient and even today her beauty is still striking.

MARSHAL CAKMAK, or Fevzi Pasha, as he was known until 1923, and under which name he took part as an officer in the World War, is today chief of the general staff of the Turkish army.

Cakmak comes from a military family. His father was colonel of the family Cakmakoglu, who called himself Ali Bey and who fought with honor and distinction in many wars. His son, Fevzi, was born in Istanbul on August 3, 1876. After attending public elementary school, he was admitted to the military academy, where he graduated with high marks in 1895, when he was appointed lieutenant. His military talent was soon recognized by his superiors, and he was attached to the general staff, where he advanced to captain in 1898. At the outbreak of the Balkan war he was sent to the Serbian-Albanian front. His courage, his personal exploits and strategical genius made him not only a great favorite with the soldiers but also known all over Turkey. He became colonel and, a year later, military and civil governor of the strategically important district of the Thirty-fifth Division, which was stationed at the Austrian-Serbian-Hungarian frontier.

AT THE END of the Balkan war he was made commandant of the Ankara Division and appointed major general in March, 1914. When World War I began he was commander of the Wardar army and took part in the defense of the Dardanelles at Cankkale, where he won citations for bravery and ability, which even drew the attention and commendation of the British first lord of the admiralty, Winston Churchill. He also distinguished himself at the Caucasian front and in Syria. After his outstanding work there he was made lieutenant general.

After the end of the war he served as chief of the general staff, as minister of war and minister of defense and president of the minister cabinet. In April, 1921, he was made colonel general and in September of the same year, marshal, as an award for his part in the victorious campaign, which brought about the independence of Turkey.

Marshal Cakmak seems very young for his 65 years. He is like a father to his soldiers and a brother to his fellow officers. He demands much of them but also of himself. He is married, has three children and lives rather a modest life. He is not very literarily inclined and reads only books on military and agricultural subjects. He is a great friend of the farmers, whose problems he knows thoroughly.

"When I am no longer useful for military service," he once said to me, "I shall retire to a farm."

This friendly and peace-loving soldier, who is longing for the flat land, the fragrance of hay and the soil, is now again, as he once was in his younger days, in an important key position and ready to serve his country, if war comes to Turkey.

Inoenue, Dr. Saydam, Saracoglu and Marshal Cakmak guide the Turkish ship of state. In these momentous times they have to make almost daily decisions of great magnitude—decisions which are significant not only for their country but for the whole world.

The Hoarder

He's loading up with rubber balls,
And hoarding many cans of beer,
Steel chisels, nails and overalls,
Red underwear and iron deer;
He's laying in hot-water bags,
And what's to buy a fishing-net
And store away some metal tags——
They're going to be hard to get!

II

He's on a hunt for flowerpots
And axious for some rope and wire;
He's out to buy a lot of cots
And wants to get another tire;
He's piling up canned groceries
And rubbers for some weather wet;
He shops for doorknobs and for keys——
They're going to be hard to get!

III

He's putting in a stock of pens
Some copper pipe and paper plates;
He's buying grates and turkey hens,
Asbestos gloves and iron gates;
He's looking for more coat hooks and
He'll buy a flute or castanet;
He'll even buy a load of sand——
It's going to be hard to get!

IV

The icepick crisis worries him;
He's buying articles of zinc;
He thinks the sugar outloo : grim;
He's bought six years' supply of ink;
He fears that arch-supporters may
Go into the war effort yet;
He's just put in a load of hay——
It's going to be hard to get!

V

Cuff buttons, razor blades and tacks,
Electric light bulbs, shaving creams,
Shoe laces, hats and open hacks
Are being gobbled up (it seems);
He's phoning for a starboard light,
Six widgets and a cravenette,
Two dozen gaskets and a kite——
They're going to be hard to get!

VI

He's ordering a case of tripe,
More toe-clips, combs and rubber heels,
He's bought a load of iron pipe
Electric fans and buggy wheels;
He thinks that he will wed a wife;
He's checking over girls he's met;
He thinks, unmarried all his life,
They're going to be hard to get!

Normandie's Designer Sees Hope for Ship

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—The designer of the capsized Normandie said today that the fallen giant could be righted only by its own buoyancy and estimated that the job would take five months.

"Men and machines aren't powerful enough," Vladmir I. Yourkevitch declared. "The Normandie will have to save itself."

As the first step in salvaging the fire-scarred 60 million dollar liner, he said all openings and vents in the ship's upper part, now under water, must be repaired and the compartments pumped free of water. Then he would pour 6000 tons of water into the double bottom and fill other lower compartments to help create buoyancy.

To aid in the operations, the designer said it would be necessary to pump mud from underneath the 83,423-ton vessel. With the ship "balanced" and the bottom freed from mud, he said he was certain the once majestic liner would begin to rise.

Yourkevitch went to the pier Monday to see flames eating away the ship's innards.

"I couldn't stay long," he said. "It was such a terrible sight."

Yourkevitch, who is 50, came to the United States with the Normandie on its maiden voyage in 1935. He returned to France, coming back to this country two years later to start his own ship designing company.

Fair Enough

Mrs. Roosevelt's Public Life

FOR ALL the gentle sweetness of my nature and my prose, I have been accused of rudeness to Mrs. Roosevelt when I only said she was impudent, presumptuous and conspiratorial, and that her withdrawal from public life at this time would be a fine public service.

PEGLER

That is just an opinion, and there may be other opinions on the subject, but I maintain that it is expressed in chaste and gentlemanly language and with no more vigor than most of us are used to in our discussion of controversial subjects.

This lady is a meddler in many matters which are very improper business for the wife of the President of the United States, a status which is constantly invoked for her lest her activities be objectively discussed as those of an ordinary citizen.

LONG AGO Mrs. Roosevelt meddled in the Newspaper Guild, which was a Communist organization. Absolutely ineligible even on the pretext of her public diary, which is not her principal occupation, Mrs. Roosevelt nevertheless accepted membership to which she was not entitled and immediately became the political foe of all those American newspapermen and women who knew the character of the guild, detested and resisted the dirty work of tireless Muscovites and bravely suffered its heartless persecutions.

She was granted membership because she was the President's wife and for no other reason, which meant that the Communists wanted to make use of her position. Thus the victims of the plot could not but feel the highest office in their own country, the Presidency, was permitted to be used against them in the interests of men and women whose mission was not to improve the lot of reporters but to establish the Soviet system of government here, and they were absolutely right.

LEGALLY Mrs. Roosevelt, even as the wife of the President, has no more authority than any other citizen of the Republic. She is on a common footing with Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. George Spelvin, but we always treat our Madame President with a special respect because the office of her husband, which she partakes of, is the highest temporal authority in our country. But when our First Lady commercializes that respect for profit and in competition with the rest of the people by her association with persons who associate with enemies of the American system, antagonizes the people, it is she, not her critics, who fails in respect for the office.

Mrs. Roosevelt's quiet salting around of her personal friends in the Government employ is no new thing. The Dies Committee has known of this for a long time, and has muttered about it, but the Dies Committee lives under a political sword and has had to speak softly lest Mrs. Roosevelt exert her influence to starve it of money with which to continue its work. Mrs. Roosevelt has openly used her office against this committee of the United States Congress.

MRS. ROOSEVELT has absolutely no right to appoint anyone to any public position, but now it comes out that she has named one actor, one eurythmicist, or dancer, and one secretary from her private payroll to paid jobs in the Office of Civilian Defense, and one professional youth-mugg to an unpaid position in the same important department. The youth, incidentally, formerly was a fair-haired boy of the Communist Front, married a young campus cutie who has been infected with the Moscow principles and celebrated her marriage with a piece in a Muscovite paper entitled "My Father Was a Liar," was divorced, and now, at the age of 32, is held up to the American people, by Mrs. Roosevelt, as a person fit for leadership of American youth. He, also, is on Mrs. Roosevelt's private payroll, the money for which is derived from the commercialization of the Presidential office.

One day in London, during the last war, one of the tabloids came out with a shocking scandal, exposing the fact that "petticoat government" had been established in Whitehall, and especially in the war office, whereby certain favorites of an influential lady were planted in safe and cushy jobs in Blighty. Winston Churchill would remember it well, for the lady was a relative of his. The British reacted calmly, the lady's ears were slapped down and Britain got into the war.

Still scrupulously avoiding impoliteness, I insist that Mrs. Roosevelt's activities have been not helpful but, on the whole very harmful. I insist that she has been guilty of imposition and effrontery that, for all her pleadings against discrimination for creed and color, has herself actively encouraged cruel discrimination against Americans refusing to join unions, wherefore she should retire.

Government Units Will Speed Up Red Cross Drive

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Grover B. Hill, executive chairman of the District Red Cross War Fund campaign for government units will meet with sub-chairmen of Government departments today at 3 p. m. to discuss plans to wind up the District's drive for $750,000.

In calling his chairmen together, Hill said, "Washington is one of the three or four major cities in the United States which have not yet completed their war fund drives. I am asking my chairmen to step up the tempo of the drive as much as possible without interfering with the work of the busy agencies."

The meeting will be held in the District Chapter House, 1730 E Street Northwest.

Meantime the Blood Donor Center, Twenty-third and Constitution Avenue Northwest, announced that yesterday the Red Cross Motor Corps escorted more than 100 Department of Agriculture employes to the Center, where they gave blood for the blood plasma supply for the Army and Navy.

House Unit Exonerates Michigan Aide

A House Military subcommittee investigating the defense program, reported to Congress yesterday it had found no evidence that Lieut. Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan participated in the awarding or negotiations of defense contracts.

In the absence of such evidence, the committee said, it was making no recommendation in the matter.

The report followed a hearing held at the request of Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, who said the Lieutenant Governor sought employment with the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. of Muskegon, Mich., in negotiating contracts.

Murphy told the subcommittee he visited the company's offices only to help a friend, E. T. Clapp, of Detroit, who wanted to act as the concern's liaison man in Washington. The Lieutenant Governor denied that he had sought to be employed jointly with Clapp and to share in fees, commissions, or salary.

Mr. Hamilton Still 'Lost' In Increasing Celebrity

New Novel by 'Angel Street' Author Out Today; Whoops, My Dear! Marlene Sends a Valentine; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT NEVER RAINS, but it pours, or something of the sort. Hardly have we dispatched Mr. Carlos MacKehenie's illuminating note, exploding the fallacy of Patrick Hamilton's inaccessibility, when along comes another one from Mr. Bennett A. Cerf, president of Random House, bearing remotely on the same subject. Says Mr. Cerf:

MARLENE DIETRICH

"Dear Mr. Bell: The producers have let me know that Patrick Hamilton's 'Angel Street' will open in Washington on February 16. Under separate cover, I take pleasure in sending you an advance copy of a new novel by Mr. Hamilton, called 'Hangover Square,' which will be published by Random House on February 12.

"Many of the qualities which have made Hamilton's 'Angel Street' one of the outstanding dramatic successes of the year on Broadway are evidenced again in 'Hangover Square,' and I think you will enjoy reading the book.

"If you can find time to drop me a line and tell me what you think of it, I will be duly appreciative."

It will be a pleasure, and I hope the book arrives sufficiently soon to make a comparison between it and "Angel Street" possible and pertinent during the E Street engagement of the play. In the meantime, I trust the producers of the stage piece also will be able to locate Mr. Hamilton!

The Postal wires, as well as the post, likewise have been active. What the winged Mercury from just around the block on F Street put on the desk last was this: "Just finished auditioning Latin-American talent for "Samba" show, to play the Earle stage February 20. Certain I have just met more good neighbors than Sumner Welles. Something very stirring about the beat of the bonga and the rhythm of the samba dancers. Sure I will be able to bring a breath of Copacabana to your doorstep. Regards. HARRY ANGER." Okay, Harry, it's been a long time since I lived down in that neck of the woods, but I'll be glad to go back 80 or 90 years to that doorstep you're talking about.

And I wouldn't under any circumstances slight the telephone company. Ted Tiller calls up to say he is in town again for a few days to give an eye and a lively acting talent to the Arts Club revival of his "Satan in the Pantry," which opened Tuesday night and will continue through tonight. Once held under option by three Broadway producers, and professionally presented in summer stock, "Satan in the Pantry" was first acted out locally some five years or so ago and scored a hit. It is scoring an even bigger one now. Under Ralph Fowler's direction, it has sprouted some new comedy twists, with Anne Ives and Murray Sheehan in their original roles and an "all-star" resident cast in support.

Romance by the Armful

If you saw too many of the boys trudging the downtown thoroughfares yesterday, looking a little self-conscious with their arms full of Valentine's flaming hearts, they were the romanticists of the drama desks. The heart-shaped, red tapestry boxes they were lugging contained corsages—of all things!—of gardenias, if they weren't camellias. The enclosed card said, "'The Lady Is Willing' to be your valentine" and came from Marlene Dietrich. If we dared blast love's young dream by running the thing down, Marlene Dietrich probably would turn out to be that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, or Al Sherman, of Columbia Pictures!

And that reminds me. When "The Lady Is Willing" opens on the screen at the Earle tomorrow, it will not be the only item of importance on the bill. As an added attraction, will be shown the Warner Brothers two-reel featurette, "Men in White," depicting the intensive training of the Army Medical Corps. This is seventh on the list of service shorts in Technicolor the Warners have made in the present emergency, having been preceded by "Wings of Steel," "The Tanks Are Coming," "Service for the Colors," "Here Comes the Cavalry," "March On, Marines" and "Meet the Fleet." William Orr, John Litel and Eleanor Parker play the leads.

It's a second week for the repeat downtown engagement of "Sergeant York," at the Metropolitan; a third for "The King," at the Little, and we refuse to mention again the seventh for "Ball of Fire," at RKO-Keith's. And while all that is going on—and on, and on—"How Green Was My Valley" has been awarded the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for January, as the best release of the month for universal consumption.

Lie-Still-My-Beating-Heart Note

Columbia

Just as it has throughout the country, "How Green Was My Valley" is proving itself a picture for Washington to remember. The exultant, warming story of the Welsh mining town reopens this morning at the Columbia after three stanzas at the Palace.

Closely concerned with living and dying, "How Green Was My Valley" nonetheless is a stirring, cheering film, expressing a concrete philosophy in universal terms. A closely-knit family circle and how it faces the changes that never change is the focal point of Director John Ford's expressive camera. An exceptionally able cast brings forceful vitality to the minor as well as the leading roles; among the players are youthful Roddy McDowell (through whose eyes the Valley is seen), Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara, Sara Allgood and Donald Crisp.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 11. When I arrived on the set of "Palm Beach Story," Preston Sturges was stretched out on an overstuffed sofa, directing Mary Astor in an overstuffed bed, with enough cushions, draperies and satin puffs to keep an army warm. All they needed were the Seven Little Dwarfs traipsing through the set, singing "Whistle While You Work." Bathroom adjoining looked as big as the polo grounds, with a pink powder puff size of an automobile tire. One pelt over the back with that would have knocked a person out. However, Mary's the sister of the richest man in the world, and the place is supposed to be a duplicate of one down in Palm Beach. Preston had just received the notices from England on "Sullivan's Travels," and was he delighted! The London Times gave him four stars.

MARY ASTOR

Preston told me that Frank Lloyd Wright, the architect, had just left. They'd never met before, but Wright liked his pictures, and wanted to meet him. Only other person he wanted to meet (and did) at Paramount was Director René Clair. Stars for once, took a back seat.

Joel McCrea says the war has brought out that old neighborly spirit lost in, these many years among our American farmers. With the hired help in the Army and defense jobs, ranchers out his way are having to band together and help one another. Uncle Sam's left Joel only one man to take care of 3000 acres, and just as soon as he finishes this picture, he'll trade his dress suit for dungarees and lay to, personally.

After he finishes "Mexican Spitfire and the Ghost," Buddy Rogers will tour the country with a "Victory Revue." Cast will include 30 people, with Buddy m.c.-ing, and the gals peddling Defense Bonds during intermissions. Between bookings, they'll do the Army camps.

Intimates are saying that Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville will be married by spring.

John Boles is off on another p. a. tour in the East. He'll return to us May 1 to make "Land of the Sky Blue Water" . . . Dalton Trumbo is putting the finishing touches on a new novel, with leading character based on life of his father.

A boy from Fort McArthur tells me that when they're shown a movie they like, they all yell "Marvelous!"—and when they don't like it, "Marvelousey!"

Carol Marcus, New York debutante friend of Gloria Vanderbilt, turned down screen test at Warners and goes to Pasadena Playhouse for stage experience before trying for film career.

Words to the Wise

SENATOR NYE: Your colleague, former Senator Rush Holt, will appear this week before the Washington grand jury investigating Nazi propaganda . . . ED STETTINIUS: This month the Department of Interior's Bureau of Mines will announce a new process which will assure the Nation's supply of aluminum . . . MAYOR LAGUARDIA: The Dr. Allyn Foster case will be brought before the grand jury. Incidentally, the special ward at Bellevue where Dr. Foster met his mysterious death still isn't being guarded. A young man hanged himself there last Friday. He was cut down at the last moment—but was left, unguarded, on a stretcher, fell off, and broke his skull.

LILLIAN HELLMAN

LILLIAN HELLMAN: Are you going to work for the Rockefeller Committee? . . . JIM FORRESTAL: Your former associate, Clarence Dillon, will be named chairman of a national campaign to raise 5 million dollars for the Navy Relief Fund . . . NEW YORK DRAMA CRITICS CIRCLE: Richard Watts, the drama reviewer for the Herald Tribune may quit his post soon, to work at the Office of Facts and Figures . . . COL. WILLIAM J. DONOVAN: When will you announce the membership of the new Planning Board you've organized for the Office of the Coordinator of Information?

ELLIOTT PAUL: Your new book, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," will be a Literary Guild selection . . . ARTURO TOSCANINI: Just to prove that anyone can play jazz in the Dixieland manner, Dr. Henry Levine, of the famed "Lower Basin Street" program, will use four members of your orchestra, to play, without rehearsal, from his new Dixieland Jazz Book . . . FANNIE BRICE: Beatrice Lillie, now in London, has volunteered to perform at the Navy Relief show at Madison Square Garden next month, and to make a tour of the camps at all the American, British and Canadian bases.

FEFE FERRY: Richard Smart, the Hawaiian millionaire, who entertained at your Mone Carlo night club, is working at his meat-packing house in Honolulu. He owns the biggest ranch of its kind in the world, and supplies the meat for the American forces there . . . LEWIS MILESTONE: This week the Russian war film which you and Joris Ivens made will be shown to the War Production Board in Washington . . . MICHAEL KANIN: "Woman of the Year," the Hepburn-Tracy movie you and Ring Lardner, jr., wrote, is such a hit at the Music Hall that it'll play there five weeks . . . JESSE JONES: Lenore Lemmon issued a check, and says it came back marked "Insufficient Rubber."

THE NATION: Your London correspondent, Charles Duff, now has no apartment. It was hit by a huge land mine, which destroyed all of his 3000 books. "Oh, well, this leaves me just about what I stood up in," he sighed. "—it leaves me only in an uncomfortable position" . . . JOHN ANDERSON: Samson Raphaelson's play about a drama critic, "Jason," will start selling tickets four weeks in advance . . . BLOCK AND SULLY: Jimmy Durante will make his first solo appearance in vaudeville, this month. He'll be on the bill with you, at Loew's State . . . ELY CULBERTSON: Sophie Tucker compiled a list of gin-rummy experts for a magazine. She placed herself as No. 1.

MUSICIANS UNION: Bandleader Ernie Holst, who won't permit any one to touch even the case of his precious Stradivarius, played the violin at a Vinton Freedley party last week—and suddenly threw it across the room, at a young man who caught it, without damage . . . GEORGE JESSEL: Your recent employe, Joyce Mathews Berle, now has a movie offer to appear in her husband's next picture—but to play the other woman role, and not that of Milton's wife . . . TALLULAH BANKHEAD: Of all the people who came to see "Clash By Night," the only one who recognized the offstage movie-dialogue as that of "Philadelphia Story" was Phil Barry, the author. Barry threatened to sue. That's why M-G-M, which supplied the soundtrack, ordered it played more softly.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER: Before Magician Orson Welles left for South America, the only Portuguese he studied was how to say "Pick a card, please" . . . LOWELL MELLETT: Allen Rivkin, who wrote M-G-M's new patriotic movie, "Joe Smith, American," is being sent to Washington by his studio.

Pix

That delightful film of two years back, "The Shop Around the Corner," is about to be carted off to filmland's limbo; that is, withdrawn from public circulation. Yesterday the Pix stayed its local execution for a brief run concluding Saturday evening.

James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Frank Morgan are the leading players in this fanciful story of Budapest, a slight romance and quiet revolution that takes place under the fishy eyes of a greedy storekeeper. Ernst Lubitsch directed with his inimitable taste for picturing in fresh, facile fashion situations that aren't so original as they seem.

So this, if all reports are to be believed, is the last chance you'll have to see a light, amusing comedy before M-G-M retires its property to its file—an unhappy custom for which one has yet to hear a convincing, understandable reason.

Skittish House Debates Pension Bill Amid Bitter Charges of 'Demagoguery'

Rep. Ramspeck Threatens A Roll Call

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday got around to debating so-called Congressional pensions, a proposition already enacted into law and approved by that chamber by unanimous consent three weeks ago.

Stung by bitter criticism and ridicule from an electorate that will chose a new Congress next November, the House devoted 1 hour and 20 minutes to the subject in a session marked by recriminations and accusations against some members and candid defense of "pensions" by others whose support of the measure might not otherwise have been made public.

In the latter category was Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, who remarked frankly on the difference between the private and publicly spoken views of opponents of the provision in the new Civil Service Retirement Act that qualifies Congressmen for annuities after certain deductions are made from their salaries.

Ramseck Derides Critics

"I don't mind telling you that the majority of members I talked to were for this bill," she said. "I wish those members who will enjoy the benefits of the act would stand up now and tell us how they feel or did feel about this bill before the newspapers got started."

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Civil Service Committee, flung at his critics the charge of demagoguery. Angered by the complaint of some members that he failed adequately to explain the legislation when the House took final action on it January 21, Ramspeck strode into the well of the chamber and observed that the measure had been fully debated in the Senate. Any House member "on the job" should have been fully informed about the provisions of the legislation, he declared.

"I say that to any gentleman who has demagogued on this question," Ramspeck shouted.

The Lady Shouts Back

"Don't you call me a demagogue," shouted back Representative Jessie Sumner, Republican gentlewoman from Illinois.

"If the cap fits the lady, let her put it on," was Ramspeck's retort.

"I have no objection to any members trying to take care of themselves, but when they stigmatize me as trying to sneak this bill through it is time to call a halt," he continued. "If this thing goes on I am going to start calling the roll."

Ramspeck pointed out that before calling up the retirement bill for House concurrence with Senate amendments, he had notified majority and minority leaders and Speaker Rayburn of his intention.

At this juncture Rayburn departed from Speaker's custom and entered the discussion long enough to remark: "The Speaker did not agree to anything." He merely recognized Ramspeck for a motion, he added.

"How's Our (Pension) Bill"

Presumably, by threatening to "start calling the roll," Ramspeck meant he might publicly identify those members who he knows favored the legislation.

He declined to amplify this remark for reporters, but did state that for several weeks before its passage, the bill was "the chief topic of conversation" in Capitol corridors. He was stopped so frequently by members who wanted to know—"How's our bill coming along?"—that he was scarcely able to get any work done, he said.

Majority Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, told the House that many people think members of Congress live in the White House and have their expenses paid by the Government.

"I wish they would pay mine," broke in Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, who argued that with future income guaranteed, Congressmen "might be more independent in voting."

"I don't know any easier touch in the world than a member of Congress," McCormack resumed. "I mark off 25 per cent of my salary for that purpose."

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, was given five additional minutes for amplification of an attack on newspapers for "calculated and deliberate misrepresentation of facts." With angry gestures toward the press gallery he accused newspapers of attempting to sow distrust of Congress while enjoying second-class mail privileges costing the Government from 90 to 120 million dollars annually.

Earlier in the day, Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, introduced a resolution for a five-member commission to study civil and military retirements in the Federal and District governments.

Stay Together At War's End, Urges Halifax

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, tonight urged continuation after the war of the United Nations' solidarity as the best hope for building "a new world upon the ruins of the old."

He spoke on the eve of the 133d anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth in the city where the Emancipator spent much of his life.

Lord Halifax stressed the all-important role of the United States in the war, recalling that Lincoln had once called this country "the last best hope of earth."

"And now," he added, "upon the resources, valor, skill and energy of these United States largely, perhaps principally, hangs the future of an entire way of life, as for a year or more it hung upon the British commonwealth alone."

In discussing solidarity in his prepared address, the Ambassador said:

"If it is in the thought of the American people, as I am sure it is in the thought of the British commonwealth, that our partnership, based on this common heritage (of Christianity and free government), is a thing too precious to each of us and to the whole world to be dissolved again, as once it was before, then I do not hesitate to say that even greater good is in the making than that which Lincoln secured by his fight to save the Union. If we can hold together, as I trust we shall, the world can take a fresh start."

Agents Ready to Help You Fill Out Your Tax Return

Both the Federal and District governments are ready to help Washingtonians fill out their income tax returns.

All questions on municipal returns, due to be filed by April 15, will be answered in the income tax division on the basement floor of the District Building, said Edward Dent, local tax assessor.

For queries on the Federal returns, scheduled to be filed by March 15, taxpayers are referred to the office of A. Parks Raisin, assistant chief field deputy for the Baltimore collector of taxes, in Room 1002, Internal Revenue Building.

Special deputies, it was announced, have been assigned to help citizens fill out their tax return blanks in the Federal agency.

Both the Federal and municipal tax units will be enlarged as the rush grows. As in years past, extra District tax assistants will be available on the first floor of the District Building about April 1 and for the Federal Government they will be available in certain postoffices and banks about the middle of this month.

Dies Is American Axis Quotes Most, Says Fly

A letter quoting President Roosevelt and the State Department as being "quite strongly" opposed to proposed public hearings last September on Japanese fifth column activity was made public by the Dies Committee last night following House Rules Committee approval of continuation of un-American activities investigations until January 3.

At the same time Chairman Fly of the Federal Communications Commission, climaxed bitter attacks on the Dies Committee during hearings on the resolution to extend its life, with an announcement that labeled Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, as the living American most quoted by Axis propagandists.

Attacked by Watson

Dies has attacked Goodwin Watson, employed in the FCC foreign broadcast monitoring service, as aligned with alleged Communist front organizations, but Fly absolved Watson of any association with FCC's analysis of the legislator's Axis standing by remarking that Dies became the most frequently quoted American before Watson's appointment.

The letter to Dies was written September 8 in reply to an inquiry from the committee about the advisability of conducting hearings on Japanese activities. Matthew McGuire, then acting Attorney General, informed Dies that the question had been discussed by the State Department and the President, "both of whom feel quite strongly that hearings . . . would be inadvisable."

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, declared in the Rules Committee hearings that he had confidential information that Dies' claim that the State Department had blocked public airing of Japanese fifth columnists was untrue, and that if his information was accurate the Dies Committee should receive the same treatment as Admiral Kimmel and Gen. Short, commanders during the Pearl Harbor attack.

"If Adolf Hitler could be here, on this question he would vote aye," Marcantonio declared.

Opposed by C. I. O.

C. I. O. representatives also opposed continuation of the Dies Committee. One of them, Clifford T. McAvoy, legislative director of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, told the Rules Committee that "there are persons in Congress who have been seeking to spread nazism through the United States.

McAvoy was asked to be specific and Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, remarked:

"I think he meant a secretary in my office (George Hill) who was convicted on two counts of perjury and is guilty of no crime before God or man."

Stark to Receive Portrait of Nimitz

A portrait of Admiral C. W. Nimitz, commander of the United States Pacific fleet, will be received for the Navy at 10 a. m. today by Admiral H. R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, in his office. The portrait was painted by McClelland Barclay, famous artist, now a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve, while Admiral Nimitz was here as chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Admiral Stark announced the formation of a national citizens' committee to raise five million dollars to be used by the Navy Relief Society for emergency needs. The committee is headed by Clarence Dillon, of New York.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

"I have had no official notification, so I cannot verify the report," said Turkish Ambassador Mehmet Munir Ertegun when I asked him about the dispatch from Istanbul to the effect that a new Turkish envoy is scheduled to come here soon.

If the rumor came true, would he retire from his country's diplomatic corps—as the dispatch also stated? "I have expressed no desire to do that," he said. "My successor? There, again, I cannot verify the report; for, as I said, I have not been told, officially, that there is to be any change at all."

Turkish Ambassador

Reading between the pauses, I did have the feeling, however, that the change reported is already settled and that, even though the final official order has not been issued, Ambassador Ertegun would not be surprised to receive it almost any time now. . . . As diplomats go in Washington, he has been here longer than most. He presented his credentials at the White House seven years ago, coming from London, where the man rumored as his successor, Tevfik Rustu Aras, is now serving as Turkish Ambassador.

Helped Chart Turkey's Foreign Policies

Formerly his country's foreign minister, Aras played an important role in helping to chart Turkey's policies in the early days of the republic; but in coming to Washington now, when his country's stand in regard to the present conflict is so vaguely defined, he probably will be facing one of the toughest jobs in his entire career. . . . I shouldn't be surprised if able Ambassador Ertegun, who has been harassed with handling quite a ticklish situation ever since war clouds began to gather, will be tremendously relieved when that official notification does come through.

Those busy Senate Ladies, who have been rolling bandages and making surgical dressings for the Red Cross twice a week, are now on the verge of taking on another defense activity. . . . At 2 o'clock this afternoon in the sewing rooms of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, first-aid classes are to begin under the direction of a physician. . . . I understand a large group is expected to be there to start the course, and when the latter is finished all who attended regularly will be prepared to administer first aid with a practiced hand.

Batista's Daughter to Attend Party

Mirta Batista, 15-year-old daughter of the President of Cuba, will attend her first formal party tomorrow evening when she is guest of honor at the Allied Victory Ball at the Mayflower Hotel. . . . She will be chaperoned by the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso and will also be accompanied by the envoy's niece, Senorita Elena Garcia Concheso, and the Cuban Military Attache, Maj. Felipe Munilla, will serve as her aide. . . . Now attending exclusive Eden Hall School for Girls, near Philadelphia, Mirta will arrive here tomorrow and will stay at the Cuban Embassy. . . . I understand she had to obtain permission from her parents in Havana before she could accept the invitation for tomorrow night's party, which is being sponsored by the local chapter of the Trinity College Alumnae Association.

Senora de Concheso

On Monday evening, Mirta—still being chaperoned by the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso—will be in New York to attend the annual banquet of the Cuban Chamber of Commerce at the Waldorf-Astoria. . . . Speaker of the evening will be Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio F. Concheso, recently returned to Washington after attending the recent conference in Rio de Janeiro. He stopped off in Havana to report to President Batista on details of the meeting and then came on to the Capital.

Archduke Otto, unpretentious pretender to the nonexistent throne of Austria, will entertain this afternoon at another in the series of late afternoon teas he has been giving this season. . . . Mention of Otto reminds me of a story making the rounds on Capitol Hill. . . . Seems the archduke was in the Senate gallery one day recently when a most attractive young woman came in and sat down beside him. . . . Presently, she asked him a question about somebody on the Senate floor, and then she followed through with still more inquiries. . . . Politely, he answered; but he refrained from elaborating his replies. . . . "You don't seem to know much more about who is who than I do," the talkative young lady went on. "You're not a Washingtonian, are you?" . . . No, said Otto, he wasn't. . . . "I knew from the way you talked," she continued. "The accent definitely is not Washington. Now don't tell me where you're from," she added coyly. "Let me guess." . . . Otto didn't tell. He maintained a discreet silence, while the young lady figured it out. "Oh, I know," she said in a flash. "I'll bet you're from Minnesota!"

Archduke Otto

Party Patter: Mrs. John C. Fremont will be hostess at a 5-to-7 fete on Saturday in her R Street home. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson will entertain that same afternoon, their party taking place from 5:30 to 7:30. . . . Mrs. Sidney Lee had lunching with her yesterday at La Salle du Bois Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Robert Patterson and Mrs. Raymond Lee. . . . Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador, will be guest of honor when Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson entertain at tea on Friday, March 6. That fete will be the third in a series that will start on Saturday with the party in honor of the Rev. Coleman Nevils. Second event in the series will take place on Tuesday, February 17, when the Culbertsons entertain in honor of Commander and Mrs. Albert J. McCartney.

Helen Williams Feted at Shower

Mrs. Kendric Nichols Marshall, wife of the president of Chevy Chase Junior College, entertained at a linen shower yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Helen Virginia Williams. The latter is to be married soon to Capt. Robert Hamilton Ingalls.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Gregory Williams, the bride-elect, is instructor of history at Chevy Chase Junior College.

Mrs. Burleigh In Capital to Visit Parents

Arriving in Washington yesterday to spend a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Peters, after a "vacation" in the Hawaiian Islands was Mrs. William Burleigh, jr.

Mrs. Burleigh went to Honolulu last fall to meet her husband, who was returning from Saudi, Arabia, by the Pacific route. Enjoying the balmy morning air on that historic Sunday morning in December while breakfasting on the lanai of the Halekulani Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh watched the "Navy manuevers" with interest and surprise. It was only when black smoke was curling up from Pearl Harbor and the "maneuverers" seemed to be taking the "game" so seriously, that they realized that this was not play. The Japanese had attacked.

Packing their bags immediately the Burleighs, through a stroke of luck, secured passage on the President Coolidge that had come in under convoy from the Far East. They sailed from Honolulu December 19, wearing their life belts the whole way in the blackout ship and arrived in the three-ship convoy in San Francisco Christmas morning.

Mrs. Peters and her daughter, Miss Anita Peters, who had been spending several months in Oakland, Calif., met the voyagers and motored with them back East. Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh had been spending a few weeks in Palm Beach, Fla., before their arrival in the Capital last night.

Several Dinners Are Held Before Chamber Concert

Capital society turned out in large numbers last night for the Chamber Music Guild concert, with a number of dinners being held before the audience streamed into the Almas Temple to hear Egon Petri, eminent Dutch pianist, Paul Garrett, clarinetist, and the Guild String Quartet.

Baron and Baroness Van Boetzelaer entertained a group at dinner, including Sir Ronald Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, before taking them on to the concert, and after the concert, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson entertained at a supper party. The Watson party was in honor of the evening's two guest artists.

The Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon took a group with them to hear their talented countryman, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke were hosts to a diplomatic gathering. In the Burke party were the Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de DeBayle, the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos, the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch and the Minister-Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora Konder.

Batts Entertained

With Mr. and Mrs. William L. Batt as their honor guests, Mrs. Gustav L. Stewart and Mrs. English Gordon entertained at a dinner last night in Mrs. Stewart's home in R Street.

Miss Dorothy Clay Ramspeck, Ensign J. R. Dunson, Jr., to Wed

MISS DOROTHY CLAY RAMSPECK

It was "So you're from Georgia too!" that started it when they met at Pearl Harbor. Came Reminiscences. Came Realization that they had grown up within 50 miles of each other. Came Romance under the Hawaiian moon.

Comes now the official notice of their betrothal as Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck of Georgia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Clay Ramspeck, to Ensign Jarrell Ridley Dunson, jr., U. S. N. R. of La Grange, Ga., and New London, Conn., son of Mrs. Jarrell Ridley Dunson and the late Mr. Dunson of La Grange.

Miss Ramspeck attended Emerson College in Boston, and the King Smith School. She also studied at Columbus University and the University of Wisconsin.

Her fiance attended the Georgia School of Technology and was graduated in 1940 with degrees in textile and mechancial engineering. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity and Phi Psi, engineering society. He was ordered into active duty in November, 1940, aboard a destroyer of the Pacific Fleet. He is a survivor of the Pearl Harbor attack and recently returned from Hawaii. He is now under instruction in submarines at the Submarine Base in New London, Conn.

Miss Ramspeck is the daughter of the former Miss Nobie Estelle Clay, of Monroe, Ga., and the granddaughter of Mrs. Ida Word Ramspeck, of Decatur, Ga. Mr. Dunson's father was vice president of the Handley Manufacturing Co., of Roanoke, Ala., and his mother is the former Miss Eula Lai Bradford, of Paris, Tenn. He is the nephew of A. C. Dunson, who is president of the Dunson Mills, Inc., of La Grange, and W. P. Dunson, of Dalton, Ga.

The wedding will take place March 1 at 4 o'clock in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Logan Party Honors Screen Star, Husband

By Patricia Grady

"I'll have to learn how to spell commissioner before I can use any other title" laughed modest Joaquin Elizalde when friends clustered around to congratulate him on being sworn in recently to his new post of Secretary of State of the Philippines, at John Logan's cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the 1925 F Street Club.

Much the center of attention at the pleasant 5:30 to 7:30 fete was the popular Mr. Elizalde, who held conferences of always-changing personnel at one of the small tables in the room where a well-laden buffet vied in popularity with a well-stocked bar. Here, there and everywhere was Mr Logan, who at first stood in line to introduce the stream of guests to his honorees—Count and Countess Oleg Cassini.

Mrs. Patrick Hurley was one of the early arrivals. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson reported to Edward Van Deventer (still on crutches with his broken leg, that her husband, the president of the Export-Import Bank, had returned from a trip to Brazil. Representative Katherine Byron stopped for a chat with Mrs. Sims Snow and Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell found things to talk about with Mrs. W. Newbold Walmsley. Greeting friends on every side was Decio de Moura, here for several weeks as a member of the Brazilian economic mission.

Others at the pleasant gathering included Miss Eleanor Meem, hatless; Col. and Mrs M. Robert Guggenheim, just back from a Florida sojourn; George Abell, who discussed New Mexico climate with Mrs. J. Frederick Essary; Miss Betty Beall, Mrs. Natalie Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, George Vournas, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Emil Hurja and Jock Merriam.

Many of the guests, who arrived well after 7 o'clock, explained to their hosts that they had just come from the Egyptian Legation party, and stayed on long after the usual closing hour to make up for their tardiness.

English Speaking Union Holds Tea

With three hostesses and three "pourers," the English Speaking Union met for its monthly tea yesterday at its clubrooms on Sixteenth Street. In the role of hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. Arthur Mason Chichester and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant.

Pouring during the afternoon get-together were Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Betts, wife of Air Commissioner Betts, and Mrs. Victor G. Brodeur.

Egyptian Envoy, Mme. Hassan Give Big Party at Legation

By Carolyn Bell

Just about every country under the sun—Axis powers excepted, of course—was represented at the mammoth party given by the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan yesterday afternoon at the legation on Sheridan Circle.

Somehow the party was reminiscent of former days—when conversation was mostly gossip and Singapore was a far-off, exotic spot. However, uniforms, both Army and Navy, were a grim reminder of the daily headlines.

While the invitations were simple "at home" cards issued in the name of Mme. Hassan only, the reception was a huge affair. Guests were culled from the diplomatic, service, official and residential set. Between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock they climbed the richly carpeted stairs to greet the pretty, dark hostess and the Minister. Mme. Hassan wore a coral crepe frock that swirled to her ankles. A jeweled clip at the V neckline and a corsage of orchids completed the attractive ensemble.

"Have you tried these Turkish sweets?—they are super"—and indeed they were. The large dining room table, centered with a bouquet of snapdragons and Easter lilies, groaned with all sorts of food. Pouring tea at one end was Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, who wore a trick, beveled hat. At the other end was Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretatry of State.

Bajpais Attend Colorful Party

Circulating here and there were Anis Azer and Anwar Niazi, who managed to confuse one young lady completely with their similar names. Guests were more or less evenly divided between the dining room, where tea was being dispensed, and the adjoining salon where champagne flowed like water—really. In the drawing room, where the bar had been set up, tall calla lilies stemmed from large bowls.

"It's a belated Christmas gift," replied Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark when someone complimented her on an exquisite flowered lapel pin and matching earrings. Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Associate Justice, was in the throng as were Mrs. Charles McNary, who chose turquoise jewelry with her black ensemble, and Mrs. Alan Kirk, wife of Capt. Kirk, the Naval Intelligence.

Making a striking appearance were the Indian Agent General and Lady Bajpai, accompanied by their colorfully gowned daughters, Bhgwati and Krishna. The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, was in deep conversation with the Minister from Guatemala when glimpsed. Nat far away were Senora de Castillo-Najera and Senora de Recinos. Senora de Recinos reports that her daughter, Laura, will not be returning to this country until spring—she is wrapped up in the affairs of her homeland. Miss Henriette Sherwood (yes she had white carnations on) chatted with Harold Masley, of the State Department.

Countess Lasocka In Gay Hat

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wearing a bright red cabbage rose tilted over her pompadour, was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. T. S. Snyder, of Key West, who is as blonde and pretty as Mildred is dark and pretty.

The Minister-Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and his chic wife, Mme. Konder, were in the throng as were the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier.

Wearing the most spectacular hat seen this side of New York was attractive Countess Lasocka, wife of the Polish Attache. Fashioned of black and white striped taffeta it flared sharply out in a snood effect. Another hat deserving note was that worn by Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, a gay toque of red and fuchsia ostrich feathers.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann were in the party as was Fritz Real of the legation. Fritz reports that there is a new counselor of the legation, a Mr. Von Burg, due to arrive in Washington any day now. Wearing a striking diamond necklace shaped like a snake Mme. Picot, wife of the Counselor of the French Embassy, spent most of the afternoon explaining to friends that she was born under the sign of the snake—according to Chinese theory. Andre Catauwi, dapper in striped trousers, was in the throng as were, the First Secretary of the Egyptian Legation and Mme. Toulba, the Attache of the Legation and Mme. Hosny, Lady Lewis, Miss Helen Kravadze, Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador, Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco, Senora de Caceras, wife of the Minister of Honduras, and many others.

Connie Sherrill, Ralph De Quevedo Will Be Married

A wedding of interest in Washington will take place in Charlotte, N. C., tomorrow, when Miss Connie Sherrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Connor Sherrill, of that City, becomes the bride of Ralph De Quevedo, of Washington and Baltimore.

Mr. De Quevedo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. De Auevedo, of Washington, and he and his parents left last night by train for Charlotte. They were accompanied by Miss Gloria De Quevedo and Mrs. William E. Leahy.

The ceremony, which will take place at 8 p. m., will be performed at the Methodist Church in Charlotte. Miss Sherrill will have her sister, Miss Beth Sherrill, as maid of honor, and there will be ten other attendants. Mr. De Quevedo will be best man for his son.

Decentralization Plan

A PLAN to eliminate congestion in Washington—at least as regards traffic—is being pushed by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofy noted reformer.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The resourceful president of the Do Something About It League faced her press conference yesterday in a new prune purple uniform with jaunty military cap. She explained that she had donned her uniform to avoid any question of her status as a parasite.

"Mrs. DeGoofey," asked an editorial pundit, "just which persons in Washington do you regard as parasites?"

"I haven't time to go into that fully today" was the reply, "but I can answer you briefly that a parasite is almost anyone other than yourself—and always the person you don't like.

"However I am more concerned at present with my new plan to eliminate overcrowding in Washington. If it works out, it may be possible for all the parasites to stay. Now my plan is very simple, a sort of sheep and goat arrangement whereby all the populace would be divided into two groups, the Earlys and the Lates.

Early Birds and Late Loungers

"Just how do you define those terms?" asked a representative of the Sophomore Press.

"The Earlys," explained Mrs. DeGoofey, "are those bright, cheery, self-righteous people who go to bed early and rise earlier. They are those persons who arrive from 10 to 15 minutes ahead of time for every appointment and regard those who are not on time as moral lepers . . . They are the ones who when they call you at 2 o'clock in the afternoon ask satirically, 'Did I get you out of bed?' . . . the ones who invite you to lunch at 12:15 and to dinner at 6 . . . who give parties and yawn in your face when 9 o'clock arrives . . . who have finished their day's work at 3 and proceed to loaf around you when you are getting under way at 5 . . . who are always promoting early morning steak frys and sunrise hikes . . . who quote proverbs at you . . . who draw moral lessons from the news of the day . . . who go about with an air of being better fed, better washed and more morally fit than any of their associates."

Night Owls Are Told Off

"What about the Lates?" asked a squirming reporter from an afternoon paper.

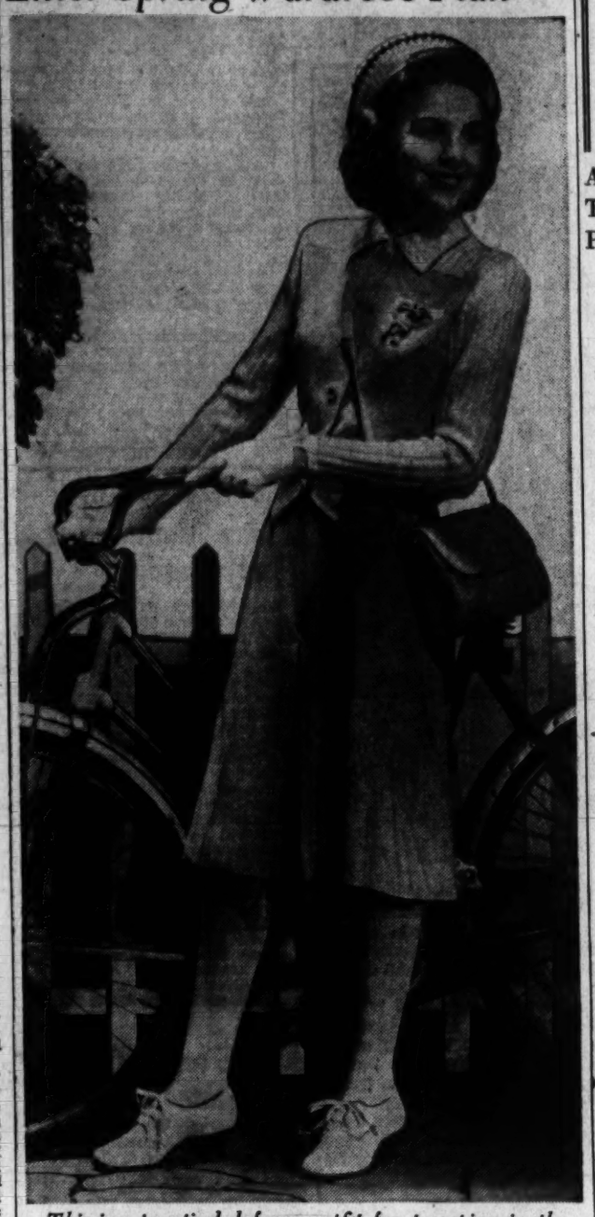
"The Lates," continued Mrs. DeGoofey, "are those pallid, decadent and superior people who simply can't go to bed until past midnight no matter how early they start trying . . . who cannot get up—except by aid of the alarm clock—before 10 o'clock in the morning . . . whose enjoyment of their ham and egg breakfasts is always marred by the sight of crass Earlys sitting before plates of kidney stew and boiled cabbage as early as 11:45 o'clock . . . who suffer heart attacks trying not to be more than 20 minutes late at an appointment with an Early . . . who call the Earlys at midnight for one-hour telephone conversations . . . who invite starving friends to lunch at 2:30 and to dinner at 8 . . . who arrive at parties at 10:30 o'clock at night and can't be driven home until 3 in the morning . . . who are always prowling around the town at odd hours when decent folk are supposed to be home and abed . . . who up until noon go about with a bored, somnolent air . . . who can never be located at home or at office because of their irregular hours . . . who invariably make those about them feel uncouth cornfed and countrified.

Keep Warring Factions Apart

"Now what makes a lot of trouble in the world is that these two groups insist on mixing. Since they are a constant source of irritation to each other and of confusion to the world, I feel that something must be done at once to segregate them. Otherwise we have the seeds of a future World War being sown.

"Now my plan is to classify every human being as a Late or an Early. Then I would have the Earlys all move out to the suburbs where they could have gardens and get up with the chickens. I would have the Lates all located downtown so they could prowl around in dens of iniquity all night. I would have these groups work on different shifts, ride on different street cars and buses, and if possible never meet. By such a plan I am convinced that not only would order be restored to the city and traffic congestion relieved, but that future world peace would be insured."

Practical Togs for Bicycling Enter Spring Wardrobe Plan



This is a practical defense outfit for tramping in the woods, biking to work, bicycling, or even doing defense walking. A long-sleeved jerkin, divided skirt, medium heel shoes and ribbed mesh cotton stockings make up the costume.

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE BICYCLE is fast becoming a cherished means of transportation these days. Now how envied is the family that can boast a bike for every member of the household from the mother to the maid.

Along with owning a bicycle goes the necessity of having the proper type of costume. It is possible to peddle a bike in a generously pleated skirt when knee socks are worn. The appearance given is not very formal, however—although it is a matter of contention whether women will ever look very dignified riding bicycles.

More practical and chic is the outfit of a deep box-pleated divided skirt, sweater, jacket or long-sleeved jerkin, cotton ribbed stockings (long), oxfords (ghillies, or plain tie type), a small beanie or peasant type bonnet, and sturdy gloves. As an alternative, slacks make a very good riding costume when made of gabardine, twill or a firmly woven fabric. Matching shirt-type blouses are available with most trousers.

The type of outfit a woman chooses depends entirely on the variety of the biking. If it means peddling to the market, a casual costume is perfectly acceptable. Biking to work or to shop requires an outfit adaptable for wear the rest of the day. Here slacks would be ruled out.

While we do not advise every woman to rush right out and buy a bicycle, it is wise to start assembling sports clothes along this line. If a new supply of hose is purchased, make at least one pair of them sturdy cotton, rib, mesh or a combination of both. There are also gloves now which permit more freedom of finger movement than others. In handbags too, there is a special type to be considered—the over-the-shoulder variety. Shoes with at least a small heel make gripping of the pedals easier too.

Armed with the proper costume, if, and when, the decree should come to put all cars in storage, a woman would be able to set out on her "wheel." And incidentally, bicycling does wonders for the hips.

No Girdles? Then Watch Your Exercise; Keep Muscles in Tone

By Ida Jean Kain

THE American corset industry is a 65 million dollar a year concern—when it is going! But the question has arisen as to whether or not the girls must have girdles.

Our experts in charge of wartime production point out that girdles take rubber. Our sources of crude rubber have been cut off and there is a limit not only to the reclaimed rubber, but to the number of times it can be reclaimed. Furthermore, the reclaimed rubber tends to lose its elasticity—which means there's no two-way stretch about it!

Then there is the possibility that our corset manufacturers may be called upon to make garments for our fighting forces. I can't seem to find out about this. I tried. I called the Army information offices in New York to ask who is going to make those wide belts the parachute troopers wear. After explaining it all to six other people, I was shunted over to a colonel who evidently regarded the request for this incidental information as more than a man should be expected to bear.

So I don't know what will happen to our girdle industry. But if there should be a shortage of girdles, the rationing might well be on a health basis so that the women who actually need such support can obtain it on a doctor's prescription.

The others should be able to do without very nicely. It is the height of the ridiculous to say, as one prominent designer did, that women would lose their self-confidence and would not be able to work as effectively in the defense program without the beautifying influence of their girdles. When it comes to a choice between vanity and survival, I am pretty sure that vanity will not count for much.

Fortunately, you can always reclaim your muscles. You have a natural girdle which is perfectly capable of holding the organs in their proper position. One set of these muscles runs up and down, paralel to the spine, another across, and a third set on the bias. Kept in tone, they afford as firm support as the most expensive corset.

After Year's Friendship, Couple Fell in Love Three Months Ago, Since When Man Has Been Pessimistically on Defensive Against Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl in my middle twenties. The man in the case (whom I shall call George) is several years older. We met about a year ago and have been going together constantly ever since. At first, we were simply good friends. We had quite a few ideas in common, enjoyed doing many of the same things and, therefore, had lots of fun together. Then, three months ago, we suddenly discovered that we were in love. We have much the same family background, no dependents, and no impediment to marriage, except a theory of George's.

He thinks we should analyze the situation all the way through to the last infinitesimal difference in temperament,—and we aren't exactly alike, temperamentally,—in order to decide whether marriage would be "right" for us. He feels we should know beforehand whether or not marriage would "work" for us. He doesn't seem to realize that even persons who love each other a great deal do clash occasionally; and that they manage to lead a happy married life in spite of it.

If it were possible to gaze into a crystal ball and read the future, I would indorse his desire to make sure before going ahead. But we have spent these last three months analyzing our prospects, without having arrived at a single positive conclusion. Is George's' theory at fault? Or is it humanly possible to guarantee happiness beforehand? If so, how?' I am an impatient creature and I don't like waiting until I am old and gray before deciding one way or the other.

I'd be perfectly content to marry him tomorrow—sure of my ability to make it work; to prove it was right. Does this mean I am being too idealistic about the whole thing? If George is right in theory, what method can we use to reach sound conclusions? If, on the other hand, I am right in thinking that faith and loving effort invested in marriage is what makes it "right"—how can I convince him of this? I have tried doing so, in a left-handed sort of way. But because I have not been entirely sure of my ground, I haven't been able to put the idea across.

All this may sound silly, but I am absolutely sure that George's conservatism is the only thing that prevents us from getting married now. He has never been in love before (in a grown-up way) and I am the first woman he has thought of marrying. However, I have had several "crushes," as he knows. Could this be his reason for hesitating? Always before, I have felt perfectly capable of managing my "love life" without any assistance. But in the case that most matters, it seems I am not. Please give me the benefit of your opinions. Sincerely, PRUE.

Turn the Tables By Agreeing With Him

DEAR PRUE: George is giving you the run-around. Your real stumbling block, at the moment, is not his desire to make sure he would be right before going ahead with marriage, but, simply, the fact that he just doesn't want to get himself married for the nonce; not even to you, who mean a great deal to him. All his hair-splitting speculations, which hold the question of marriage at arm's length—as a proposition supposedly to be studied exhaustively in the light of possible present and future drawbacks—are designed more to "talk you out of the idea" than to talk himself into it.

He may be innocently (or self-deceptively) unaware of the motives animating his performance; but nevertheless, his aversion to the prospect of being "hooked" is the true explanation of the existing stalemate. This aversion may stem partially from a hunch that you are not "the right girl" for him, despite the strong bond of feeling that has developed from your recreational association. Or it may inhere altogether in a selfish and essentially self-sufficing preference for bachelorhood and its "lone wolf" prerogatives.

In any event, the fact that he took the initiative in "talking down" marriage, simultaneously with adopting the platform of "being in love" with you, shows which way the wind blows, insofar as his long-range intentions toward you are concerned. With a woman, to be reciprocally in love is synonymous with planning the trousseau and "setting the day;" with hunting the house and engaging the minister. Not so with a nonmatrimonially minded man—which may be a man not yet in a marrying mood (while yet not fundamentally opposed to marriage); or a man who differentiates between "an adorable creature" and "the sort of girl I would want for my wife."

No sooner had testimonials of love been mutually exchanged, I daresay, than you began steering most conversations in the direction of what you assumed to be the next inevitable step, namely: marriage. And the man, respecting the integrity of your naive expectancy, though unprepared to oblige it; and reluctant, also, to disrupt the pleasant tenor of your association,—which he probably had shortsightedly hoped would rock along much as before, with nothing more taken for granted than your love of each other,—then started countering with pessimistic speculations regarding marriage generally, and the marriage you had in view, particularly.

And so the deadlock developed, that has held for three months—months during which you have failed entirely to comprehend the true implications of his stand. If George wanted to get married, and loved you—there would be no need to persuade him of the feasibility of the step. He would hustle you to the altar—and the consequences be hanged! For every argument in favor of marriage you might have, he could give you a bigger and better (and not necessarily true) one, if he were an essentially discursive type of man. However, a contemplative man who has made up his mind in the affirmative on this vital topic, doesn't talk much about it. He lets his actions proclaim his sentiments and intentions.

The fact that your conservative George sees fit to defeat your optimistic arguments with pessimistic objections at every turn, means to me that you haven't a ghost of a chance of selling your proposition to him—in persuasive words. However, you might gain your point by indirection—if you still think it worthwhile. You might table the discussion by saying, in effect: "Okay, pantywaist. So you're afraid to get married? Well, I'd be afraid of it, too—with you. Your shivers are contagious." And then turn your back on him, more or less, as a matrimonial prospect, so that he fancied himself facing the alternatives of marrying you now or losing you forever. It is just possible you might thus maneuver him into making a final commitment. Once in the bag, he probably would set himself the task of doing his very best by his marriage. M. H.

Katherine Fenwick And Livingston To Marry Saturday

Another Valentine Day wedding looms on the horizon as Miss Katherine Elizabeth Fenwick sets the date of her marriage to Moynton Parker Livingston. Her plans are for a small affair, with only close friends and relatives attending.

The ceremony, which will be at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Taylor Fenwick, 2220 North Quantico, Arlington, will be performed at 2 o'clock Saturday by her brother, the Rev. Lawrence Fenwick, of Augusta, Ga. The couple will have only two attendants, Miss Fenwick's sister, Mrs. John Demarest, and Mr. Livingston's brother, Lawrence Livingston.

Although the wedding date was suddenly announced, leaving but little time before the ceremony, several parties are on the books. Among them was a buffet supper given last night by Mrs. William Tate, and a similar fete tomorrow night, when Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Fenwick will entertain for the couple.

Shower Given For Miss Coan

In a whirl of parties before her marriage to Wilfred Bassard Leclaire on Saturday, Miss Margaret Genevieve Coan, daughter of Mrs. William Joseph Stewart and the late Wilbur David Coan, was feted at a shower last evening by Miss Phyllis Davis in her home on Jamestown Road.

Tomorrow evening Miss Coan's aunt, Mrs. Joseph King Northwood, will give a buffet supper in honor of the couple after the wedding rehearsal. The party will be held in her apartment at the Park Central. Among the other recent parties in honor of the bride-elect were the buffet supper given by Miss Brusilla Gottshall and the shower at which Mrs. Don Garber was hostess.

The wedding will take place at 4 o'clock in the Holy Trinity Church. Miss Brusilla Gottshall will be the maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Phyllis Davis, Mrs. Francis William Crotty, of New York; Miss Margaret Schafpo, a cousin of the bride, from Chicago, and Mrs. Frederick Shasser.

Teachings of Camp Fire Girls Still Followed In Peruvian Village, Mrs. Coile Finds

IMMEDIATELY upon arriving in Huancayo, Peru—a tiny village 11,000 feet above sea level in the high Andes—Mrs. Russell Cleven Coile checked up on the Camp Fire Girls' activities.

Much to her disappointment, she found that the groups her mother, Mrs. Paul G. Ledig, had organized there 9 years ago had disbanded. And, if youthful Mrs. Coile had stayed a little longer, she would have reorganized the Camp Fire Girls in that small town. But her husband, to whom she recently was married in Peru, was recalled to Washington to duty in the War Department, so she left her mother to start the clubs again.

Mrs. Russell Coile

"Although the Camp Fire Girls had disbanded," said Mrs. Coile, "a few of the old members who are now mothers of several children had not forgotten the sanitation teachings of the Camp Fire manual, which my mother had translated into Spanish, along with songs," she said.

The young mothers, she pointed out, were insisting that their young offspring daily brush their teeth, and bathe . . . something unheard of by the Indians before her mother introduced the toothbrush to Huancayo natives about 9 years ago.

"One day," explained Mrs. Coile, "I accompanied my mother to buy toothbrushes for all the girls in the Camp Fire group. I was only a child then. The mayor of the village was so pleased over the idea that he insisted upon paying for the toothbrushes himself. Instead of using it, one girl was so delighted that she packed hers away to keep as a seuvenir from the mayor."

"The aristocrats aren't interested in clubs," continued Mrs. Coile. "The Indians who farm don't have much time for them, but the servant class is keen on belonging to them."

Short skirts and permanent waves are invading this primitive village. As soon as a woman cuts her hair short she has it permanented, according to Mrs Coile. Lipstick and rouge aren't very popular among the natives. Only the most daring, a few who have visited in Lima, use cosmetics. However, they all slick their hair down with various forms of homemade hair remedies.

Only charter member of the first Camp Fire Girls' group, which was organized about 6 years ago in Bethesda, Mrs. Coile holds the rank of Torch Bearer, the highest that can be earned by a Camp Fire Girl.

Receiving with the newly appointed officers were Mrs. John Peter McGovern, Mrs. Aubrey Fennell, Miss Florence Judge and Mrs. John Victory.

New Members Elected

AT A recent meeting of the National Society, Daughters of the Founders and Patriots, 23 new members were elected to membership. Under the chairman, Miss Bessie Porter, of Baltimore, the society will restore town records in Virginia and Vermont. Awards will be given to the cadet of the graduating class of the United States Military Academy at West Point having the highest standing in military hygiene; to the midshipman at the Naval Academy in the graduating class demonstrating the greatest proficiency in navigation. To the graduating cadet of the United States Coast Guard Academy most proficient in ordnance and gunnery also will go a prize.

Democratic Club

MRS. EDWIN A. MERRITT was reelected president of the Women's Democratic Club of Chevy Chase for the second term at the regular meeting of the club recently at the home of Mrs. Curtis Walker.

Mrs. Morgan Ailes, Mrs. E. Nesbit Wright and Mrs. Charles Beach were elected vice chairmen, with Miss Elizabeth Gilliland as corresponding secretary and Mrs. H. W. Floyd as recording secretary. Mrs. Malcolm Varnall was elected treasurer, with Mrs. Walker parliamentarian and Mrs. Robert E. Kline and Miss Louise Swain as auditors.

Those on the nominating committee were Mrs. Varnall, chairman; Mrs. Floyd, Mrs. Ailes, Mrs. Wright and Miss Swain.

The honorary presidents of the club are Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, Mrs. Merritt, Mrs. Anais Pugh, Mrs. James Cummings, Mrs. Ralph Berry, Mrs. Ralph Chase and Mrs. Alfred J. Steffen.

Chi Sigma Dinner

THE WASHINGTON ALUMNI Chapter of Chi Sigma National Sorority held its sixth annual reunion at the Lafayette Hotel last night. It was a "good neighbor" dinner in honor of the South American countries. Paul R. Kelbaugh, acting chief of economics, Pan American Union, was guest speaker. Mrs. Ruth Foster was installed as the alumni president, succeeding Mrs. Dorothy Atchison.

Other officers installed were Margarite Collins, vice president; Mary Smith, recording secretary; Kathline O'Connor, corresponding secretary, and Virginia Norton, treasurer.

Loraine Leese Good, a founder of the sorority, was in charge of the banquet and acted as toastmistress for the event.

Miss Crum Guest Speaker

MISS MARY CRUM, former president of the Vienna Business and Professional Women's Federation, and now here in connection with the war program, was a guest speaker at the open house of the Business and Professional Women's Club last evening at 1644 Connecticut Avenue. She told of club activities in Vienna before the war and the condition of women there now.

Learn Modern Etiquette Rules

TIMES CHANGE—and etiquette with them.

Flowery introductions—"Let me make you acquainted with ——" aren't used any more in smart circles and the girl who blunders so seems unused to social life.

"Miss Jones, Mr. Smith" is preferred—a point she could easily learn, brushing up on modern etiquette.

Also, a popular girl today knows how to introduce her military friends. Military forms are important! The custom now is to introduce a soldier by his title, from corporal up. The higher rank is named first.

And the modern girl learns etiquet for business, as well as for dinner parties, charms in each world!

At a job interview she knows that as caller she makes the first move to end the interview.

At a dinner party she knows what to do at each course. She doesn't call her butter knife a "butter spreader," she uses her fork the newer Continental way.

Our new 40-page booklet, "The New Book of Everyday Etiquette," gives a complete up-to-the-minute code for moderns—teen age and older. Has rules for parties, dates, theaters, restaurants, public places, business; a chapter on "Your Friends in the Service."

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "The New Book of Everyday Etiquette," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Hadassah Group Plans 'Member' Party Sunday

The business and professional women's division of Hadassah will be hostesses at another member-bring-a-member party Sunday at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Francke, 1313 Randolph Street Northwest. Supper will be served at 5:30 p m.

A very novel and entertaining program has been arranged by the chairman, Mrs. Lena Weiss, assisted by Mrs. Mary Morse in charge of hospitality. Mrs. Jessie Breier, president of the division, will greet the guests. Mrs. Henry Segal will address the group.

The American affairs committee, headed by Mrs. Breier, reports that a large percentage of the membership is presently engaged in wrapping surgical dressings at the Walsh mansion and attending first-aid classes. Miss Rebecca Levitan, chairman of Red Cross work, has turned over to that organization approximately 300 knit garments made by members of the division.

AWVS and OCD Cooperates Here

The American Women's Voluntary Services is cooperating with the District Office of Civilian Defense by sending several of its members to take the training course for volunteers who will man the information booths in the city. After the volunteers have completed the course, they will be given a written examination, will have three four-hour periods of observation in the D. C. Defense Council booth, the Travelers Aid booth at Union Station and the booth at the Soldiers Club in the Gunton Building, and then they will be assigned for duty in one of the District information centers.

The course, which starts tomorrow in the District Building, will last for 13 sessions and should fit the graduates to answer a great variety of questions intelligently and sympathetically.

Card Party Tonight To Aid Retreat House

A benefit card party for the Washington Retreat House, under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary and other friends and members of the Knights of Columbus, will be given tonight at 8:30 o'clock at St. Patrick's Hall, 924 G Street Northwest.

The sisters who work at the Retreat House urge attendance. The work of retreats in the archdiocese will be assisted.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Tydings Would Shift Employes to War Work

Senator Tydings yesterday asked for a Congressional investigation that would be voted. He wants the Senate Appropriations Committee to determine how many employes in nonwar agencies can be transferred to jobs in war agencies either temporarily or for the duration. He believes that thousands could be shifted to vital war work, and if they were, it would relieve housing and office space crowding and save the Government money.

Thousands already have transferred to war jobs. But thousands more could be shifted, and would be, under proper conditions. The President issued an executive order several months ago that was designed to facilitate transfers from nonwar to war agencies. The employe is guaranteed his old job under the order, which is an incentive to do war work. The order has been bogged down in red tape at the Civil Service Commision and the most hasn't been made of it, though a number of employes have been transferred to skilled labor jobs in Navy yards and Army arsenals.

Moreover, the commission's authority under the order isn't well-defined. Any agency with a "defense" listing—and 95 per cent of them have such listing—has authority to block transfers of its employes. A redefinition of "defense" agencies appears to be in order. Furthermore, the commission is permitted under the order to request transfers of only those employes who are now working below their skills. For example, a stenographer who is working as a typist. The executive order needs strengthening.

War agencies have appealed to the commission countless times for experienced Federal administrators and supervisors. The commission set up a special unit to fill the needs but to date it has accomplished very little, according to war officials, despite the fact that hundreds in nonwar agencies here have expressed a willingness to be transferred. Here again, agencies just won't release their employes. Under another executive order, a defense agency has full authority to block transfers of its employes. It's all confused by red tape regulations and a Congressional inquiry might clear the decks for action.

Vinson's Proposal

Another Congressional inquiry was proposed yesterday by Representative Vinson, of Georgia. The legislator suggested in a joint resolution that the President appoint a five-man board to inquire into the Federal and District retirement systems. The board would look into the equality of the several different systems and make recommendations for their improvement. The proposed investigation would cover Social Security, Railroad Retirement, Civil Service, Army, Navy, State, judicial and the half dozen other Federal systems.

Raleigh, N. C., is now being looked over for space to ship the National Parks Service. Charlottesville and Luray also are possibilities . . . Messengers at the adjutant general's office have formed a Committee for the Economic Advancement of Messengers in a move to get their salaries raised from the lowly $1080 . . . Society of Personnel Administration will discuss manpower tonight at a dinner meeting at the Y. W. C. A. . . . Tom Harris has been appointed assistant general counsel of OPA.

The Board of Immigration Appeals probably will be kept here. It has about 30 employes. Meantime, plans are going ahead to transfer Immigration and Naturalization's 1600 other employes to Philadelphia the last week in February . . . Alex Holtzoff didn't draft the Foreign Agent Registration Act that the President vetoed. Sorry . . . What's happened to the Office of Alien Property custodian who was to be named weeks ago? Justice and Treasury have been scrapping over the work that the President appointed Justice Byrnes to straighten out. It's reported that Byrnes wants Leo Crowley and Justice to get the job but Treasury continues to object.

War Grants Him Respite

War has interrupted the task of Dr. Charles R. Kummer, University of Connecticut instructor, who intends to peruse the Congressional Record for 152 years. Called to serve with the Office of Emergency Management, Kummer said he had searched up to 1900 for material on the relationship between Congress and the Supreme Court. He thinks the job will take years.

A Slight Slip

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, answering questions about Selective Service in Goldsboro, N. C., referred to registration "next Tuesday." "You mean Monday," spoke up a board member. "Certainly," said Gen. Hershey, head of the Selective Service system, "I used to go to school on Saturday in Indiana and had Monday off. I suppose I still think of Tuesday as being the first day of the week.

Police Car Smashed in Collision With Bus

Squad Car En Route To Answer Call When Smash Occurs

Two scout car policemen were seriously injured in a collision with a bus at Thirteenth and M Streets Northwest yesterday while responding to a call to settle a family squabble.

Privates Irving Rosenberg, 50, and R. Eugene Danielwicz, 52, were removed to Emergency Hospital in an unconscious condition.

The acident occurred a few minutes after 5 p. m., when thousands of office workers were on their way home. Traffic in four directions at the intersection was tied up for a half-hour. The scout car, in which the officers were riding, was wedged between the bus and a safety zone platform.

According to police, the scout car was going east on M Street in response to the call of a shooting in the 1300 block of Eleventh Street Northwest. The bus, owned by the Capital Transit Co., was crossing the intersection proceeding south on Thirteenth Street. The two vehicles came together with a resounding crash.

The bus driver, Leroy Kelly, 24, of 1406 Webster Street Northwest, told police he did not hear the cruiser car's siren. He was charged with failure to give the police car the right of way. Neither Kelly nor the seven bus passengers were hurt.

The policemen are both veterans and attached to Second Precinct station. Rosenberg lives at 1104 Allison Street Northwest; Danielewicz, at 5330 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest.

Civilians Named To Try Officers In Assault Case

A special civilian trial board was named by the Commissioners yesterday to hear charges against two policemen accused of assault in 1940.

Appointment of the civilian trial group was requested by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, who at the time of the case was an inspector and was instrumental in bringing suspensions against the two officers.

The board named includes E. A. Dent, District assessor; A. R. Pilkerton, auditor and Albert F. Jordon, insurance department head.

No date was set for the trial. The two officers are Privates Henry J. Martin and James E. Stabler. They were indicted on the assault counts, but charges were later dismissed in District Court.

Munter Urges Drive for Vote

Godfrey Munter, past president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, last night urged members of the Rhode Island Citizens Association to expend greater efforts now in order to attain District suffrage.

The meeting was held at the Woodridge Sub-Branch Library, Twenty-second Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Ruthven K. Smith urged support of the Washington Salvage for Victory campaign.

Priority Asked To Complete Kramer School

Maintaining that unless the building is finished and made available for school purposes "the health, welfare and education" of Anacostia children will be "seriously impaired," the Board of Education yesterday adopted a recommendation urging the War Production Board to grant priorities for completion of Kramer Junior High School.

The board is seeking completion of the school for school uses, rather than for Federal Government office purposes, as has been proposed.

The school, being built at Seventeenth and P Streets Southeast, is about 20 per cent finished. Officials have pointed out that construction on the building will have to stop soon unless priorities for materials are obtained.

The building is urgently needed, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said in the recommendation, to relieve a situation in which the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School has an enrollment of 622 over capacity.

The recommendation adopted by the board states that "congestion is due directly to national defense activities in the area in which the Kramer Junior High School will serve."

One board member expressed concern the District government might be desiring to use the building for other than school purposes. Commissioner Guy Mason, reached later over a telephone by a reporter, flatly denied this.

Mason said the Board of Commissions had signed a letter saying it was all right with the board for the Federal Government to complete and use the building provided it would turn it back to the schools when the war is over. This plan is favored by the board, he said, only in case priorities can not be secured to complete the building for school use.

Builder Asks Court to Bar Zoning Order

Seeking an injunction against a District Zoning Commission order, which would ban erection of a 240-unit apartment building in Washington's Crestwood section, a suit was filed in District Court yesterday by a local builder.

Harry Poretsky, 4512 Iowa Avenue Northwest, asked the court to block an order changing the section from a "residential C" area to a "restricted A" area. Only one-family dwellings may be built in the latter class.

His property is a 2-acre tract bounded by Sixteenth Street, Piney Branch Road, Rock Creek Parkway and Shepherd Street. He asserts he has already paid $10,000 on the purchase price of the land and has spent about $12,000 more in preparation for building. He charges the reclassification, ordered November 7, 1941, was illegal because a substitute for one of the board officials acted at the meeting.

Named as defendants were the District Commissioners, Capitol Architect David Lynn and Newton B. Drewery, Public Buildings and Grounds head. Drewery's place at the session is said to have been taken by his assistant, Arthur E. Demaray, allegedly rendering the change "invalid and unconstitutional."

14th and Maine Widening Project To Begin Monday

Street widening and paving operations on the grade separation structure at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest will begin Monday, Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst announced last night.

Contract for the street work was let by the Commissioners yesterday to the Wilmoth Paving Co., which submitted a low bid of $233,745.50. The concern's bid was 6.37 per cent lower than the office estimate of $249,657, Whitehurst said.

Some 50,000 square yards, or about 5 miles, of paving must be done in connection with grade separation project, and at least one-half of the work must be completed by April 1, the balance by June 1.

Work on the main structure will begin immediately after the widening and saving is done. Bids for both the main structure and railroad bridge are scheduled to be received February 17, Whitehurst added.

Policeman With Good Memory Traps Nurse Attack Suspect

A veteran policeman with a good memory yesterday tracked down a suspect who has confessed attempting to rape a Providence Hospital nurse, according to police officials.

JOHN GWINN

The nurse was seized by an assailant last Sunday night near the hospital. The nurse severely bit the attacker's finger and finally was able to repel him. The suspect's right index finger was found to be lacerated.

The patrolman, John Gwinn, 40, of Fifth Precinct Station, was off Sunday, but read of the attempted attack on the girl in Monday's papers. He observed that the attack paralleled four similar assault cases involving Providence Hospital nurses in 1939, when the attacker was apprehended and convicted.

Policeman Gwinn dug into the arrest records and came up with suspect's name and his former address. He then traced the suspect's movements, and arrested him at his home at 5 a. m. yesterday. After an hour's questioning at headquarters, the suspect admitted to the attempted attack.

The suspect, police believe, may be the assailant of three other assault cases here during last weekend.

Swift Senate Action Seen on Measure Providing Housing And Public Works

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Swift Senate action on the bill authorizing appropriation of 50 million dollars for construction in the District area of Federal war workers' homes and facilitating public utilities was foreseen last night following House passage of the measure by a record vote of 303 to 18.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, to which the bill probably will be referred, promised that "if it comes to us it will be handled expeditiously."

The measure would enable construction of an expected 10,000 homes besides increased waterworks, sewer, street, school and hospital facilities to help care for an announced influx of 85,000 more Federal workers to the Capital area during this year.

40 Millions for Housing

While the measure does not specify the number of houses to be constructed, Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer has said that the fund will permit the erection of 10,000 units. It is expected that the houses will cost about 40 million dollars, while increased public works will require approximately 10 million dollars.

Unanimous Public Buildings and Grounds Committee support was behind the bill when it came to the floor yesterday, Chairman Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, told the House.

In tracing the development of the measure Representative Bell (Democrat), of Missouri, declared, "If our war effort is to be carried out successfully it is as important that there be adequate desk workers in Washington as that there be men in the field."

Emphasizing the need for additional housing in this area, he said, "Private building is doing and should do as much as possible. But under present conditions it is not possible for private concerns to do all the work."

Building City Within City

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the District Committee, said, "Now we are building another city within the city. Within the next 11 months approximately 85,000 Federal workers will come to Washington, which means that there will soon be about 200,000 additional men, women and children here."

He stressed the manifold problems of transportation, hospitalization and schooling which will arise in conjunction with the influx and declared that the bill will facilitate the public works necessary to meet the situation.

The overtaxed conditions in District hospitals was described by Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey. She particularly cited the need for more beds at Columbia Hospital—an institution specializing in obstetrical cases.

City Needs More Police

"There is also a great need in the District for more police," she said. "A great many girls are coming here every day to work for the Government, and they need the utmost protection."

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, reiterated his plea that to meet the increasing parking problem the Mall be converted to parking space use. He said that Federal workers have to leave their offices frequently to move their automobiles in order to avoid receiving tickets, estimating that "10,000 hours of time daily for which Uncle Sam pays" are expended by employes moving their cars.

Following two hours of discussion of the bill Representative Moser (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, made a point of no quorum after a voice vote. The roll call vote resulted. Although he did not speak against the bill on the floor, Representative Moser said later he was opposed to it and refused to comment.

Opposition to the measure at no time centered on specific subjects and debate took the from of questions and answers.

Drawing-Room Deal

During debate on the bill, Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, charged that the sale of Friendship, 75-acre Wisconsin Avenue estate of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, to the Federal Government as a low-cost housing site for one million dollars, "looks suspiciously like a drawing-room deal."

His charge was made in a demand for "an explanation of some kind" before Congress increases the borrowing authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation 2½ billion dollars, as has been proposed. The House has not yet begun consideration of the proposal.

In addition, he cited the corporation's purchase of the McCormick-Goodhart property in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, just outside of Washington, owned by Leander McCormick-Goodheart, of the staff of the British Embassy, whom Beiter termed "another member of Washington society."

He declared that the McCormick-Goodhart property "is many miles away from the Government departments and is not easily accessible. But the Defense Homes Corporation chose this fashionable estate as the site for another low-cost housing development for Government workers.

Boys Give Ear to a Story of Scouting

Hearing Opens Today on Milk Price Increase

A hearing, expected to last two days, will be opened at 9:30 a. m. today in the South Agriculture Building auditorium on a proposed cent a quart increase in the prices of milk and cream.

Representatives of consumer interests indicated yesterday they will strenuously oppose the rise, which would mean 16-cent milk—possibly 17—and tack another penny onto the retail price of half-pint bottles of cream.

Mrs. Beatrice Schalet, acting chairman of the Consumers Milk Committee, protested because the public received only a six-day notice of the hearing. She said attempts to obtain a postponement had proved futile.

Groups which oppose the increase of 46 cents a hundredweight demanded by farmers who supply the Washington marketing area, include the Industrial Union Council, League of Women Shoppers, Consumers' Milk Committee, United Federal Workers, C. I. O. women's auxiliaries and the subcommittee on consumer prices of the District of Columbia Council, according to Mrs. Schalet.

E. O. Mather, of the Agriculture Department solicitor's office, will preside over the hearing on revision of the Federal milk marketing agreement, affecting production and distribution conditions, as well as prices, for this area.

Numbers Game Report Probed

The Civil Service Commission was investigating reported operation of a numbers game in one of its own offices at Seventh and F Streets Northwest, it was learned last night.

Reports that several minor officials, in addition to a messenger, were involved could not be confirmed at the commission offices. However, the fact that an investigation was in progress was admitted, although, it was stated, it had not yet been concluded.

Cab Drivers' Union Chief Calls Taxi Pick-up Service Failure

At least one-third of the taxis authorized to participate in the new emergency "pick-up" service are failing to do so and the program is a "complete failure," Edwin A. Glenn, president of the Cab Drivers Union, charged yesterday.

A check at strategic point around town during rush hours, said Glenn, indicated that a great many drivers are refusing to display "pick-up" signs and he said that other authorized drivers are deliberately keeping their cabs off the streets during peak-times.

Glenn, who claims to represent some 1800 cabmen, said drivers are refusing to join the service because they were not consulted on the plan by their association heads and the Public Utilities Commission.

When word of Glenn's statement reached Gregory Hankin, PUC chairman, he commented:

"No taxicab pickup service is being shoved down anybody's throat."

Obviously referring to Glenn's reported study of the situation during rush-hours, Hankin said:

"If anybody wants to make a scientific survey based on actual facts as to how this experiment is turning out, he is welcome to do it and we shall be glad to take the facts into consideration at the formal hearing which is to take place March 5."

He warned, however, that any person wanting to "intervene" must file notice with the PUC by February 23 and abide by rules and regulations applicable to the proceeding.

In stronger language, Hankin said: "The determination of whether this service is successful or not will be based solely upon the facts relating to the use of the pick-up service and the demand for it on the part of the public. It will not be based on any irresponsible claims as to who wants what."

Further disputing Glenn's contentions, representatives of the 14 companies participating in the "pick-up" service last night expressed "general satisfaction" with the way "things are going."

John H. Royer, president of the Taxicab Owners Association, said, however, the participants were not entirely pleased with afternoon operations.

Board Rebukes Boat Owners For Lockout of Fishermen

Broadly hinting of Government action to take over the operation of 50 strike-bound New England fishing vessels, the National War Labor Board handed down its first official decision yesterday. It contained a scathing denunciation of the federation of ship owners involved, whom the board charged with conducting a "lockout" and with committing an "unpatriotic act."

The seamen's union, not a party to the national C. I. O.-A. F. of L. no-strike pact, represents 800 fishermen. It struck on January 5 over the question of war risk insurance, but agreed promptly to return to work under stipulations set forth, by the board for a future, binding, determination of the issue. The owners, however, declined to accede unless the union agreed to renew a contract, without change, for another year.

The board ruled that this demand "went entirely beyond the premises of the dispute then pending." It also charged that the employers refused a board request to appear at hearings.

The decision, written by Dean Wayne L. Morse, public member of the board, read in part:

"The conduct of the employers in this case, their defiant attitude toward the board, their obvious lack of appreciation and understanding of the patriotic obligations which they owe to America today in keeping war production going, is demonstrated by their defiance of the judicial processes of the National War Labor Board."

"Unless the employers involved comply immediately with the decision of the National War Labor Board, their defiance of said board must be repudiated by patriotic Americans and challenged by whatever forces of government may be necessary to obtain compliance."

Besides Dean Morse, who is dean of the Oregon University law school, the decision was concurred in by William H. Davis, board chairman, Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, all representing the public; Roger D. Lapham, board chairman of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., A. W. Hawkes, president, United States Chamber of Commerce, and George H. Mead, president, the Mead Corporation, representing employers; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer, United Mine Workers, C. I. O., R. J. Thomas, president, United Automobile Workers, C. I. O.; Robert J. Watt, international representative, and Matthew Woll, vice president.

The 50 boats which have been idle customarily catch almost all the fish sold in the Boston market and about 40 per cent of the total annual catch of New England.

Van Duzer Asks Schools to Open Half-Hour Later

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said yesterday that the Board of Education has not discussed the possibility of delaying the opening hour of schools from 9 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. in order to relieve morning rush hour traffic as proposed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Van Duzer made the proposal in a letter to Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee. His letter was in reply to a message forwarded by Representative Randolph from Bernard L. Eberts, local attorney. Eberts made seven proposals for traffic reform which were rejected by the traffic director.

Van Duzer has favored advancing the school opening hour for several years. A survey has revealed that approximately 17,000 children use buses and street cars to get to school in the morning hours. A change in time would have to be approved by the Board of Education before such action could be taken.

3-Man Board Named to Handle Distribution of New Cars

A special three-man committee, to operate under the District Rationing Board, was named by the Commissioners yesterday to administer distribution of new automobiles.

The committee, which will begin functioning today, includes Arthur P. Drury, local attorney; H. Lawrence Choate, insurance agent, and John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union.

Rationing of new autos which were purchased but undelivered prior to January 1 begins today. General rationing of new cars will start February 26.

The Commissioners also announced they had requested school authorities to permit the use of school buildings for sugar rationing registration scheduled to start next month.

In asking use of the schools, the city heads acted on a suggestion from Frank Bane, director of field divisions, OPM.

Prof. Ward Lectures On Chemical Warfare

Prof. Henry P. Ward, of Catholic University, gave a lecture on chemical warfare to 175 air raid wardens in the Michigan Park area last night in the chemical laboratory at the university.

Demonstrations of incendiary bombs also were given. The class was the second held for wardens at the university.

'Salvage for Victory' Aides Appointed

Wilfred H. Blanz, chairman of the Washington Building & Loan Association's advisory committee, yesterday announced the following men had been named to help with the "Salvage for Victory" program: Otto Hermann, I. S. Symons, Howard E. Thompson, William F. Dyer and Martin Cook. Letters will be sent to all associations in the District, Blanz said, asking them to participate in saving waste materials that would be salvaged for defense.

Speakers will be Maj. Gen. L. D. Gasser, director of protective services for OCD, and E. L. Westropp, third secretary of the British Embassy. Gen. Gasser will talk on "Organization of Civilian Defense" and Westrope on "The London Blitz."

Junior Board Will Buy Defense Stamps Today

Approximately 80 board members will assemble at their booth, Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest at 2 p. m. to purchase $3300 worth of United States defense savings stamps from their treasury fund.

The booth is staffed by members of the board and their wives.

Officer Demonstrates Precaution Methods

Lieut. J. S. Fluckey, U. S. N., demonstrated to 350 air-raid wardens of the Brightwood defense area methods of extinguishing incendiary bombs and precautionary measures for combating poisonous gases last night. The meeting was held at Paul Junior High School, Eighth and Oglethorpe Streets Northwest.

Following the demonstration Lieut. Fluckey described medicinal treatments to be used in the event of gas attacks and told the wardens that while fatalities from gas were infrequent injuries sustained were extremely painful.

East Central Group Meets Tonight

A mass meeting of residents in the east central civilian defense area will be held tonight at 8 in Dunbar High School, First and N Streets Northwest. Chief Air Raid Warden Murphy and other District defense leaders will speak.

The east central area is bounded by Seventh Street Northwest, Third Street Northeast, Florida Avenue and K Street.

Seaway Action Urged Swiftly By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt yesterday appealed for swift House action on the billion-dollar St. Lawrence seaway-rivers and harbors bill as the measure encountered gathering bi-partisan opposition.

The President's letter, addressed to Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, said the bill authorized projects urgently needed in the war emergency.

Opponents of the bill, who have summoned a strategy conference for February 19, refused to call off their fight on big nondefense projects added by the committee after the President's original request for the 277 million dollar St. Lawrence development.

Segregation Not Asked

President Roosevelt in his letter yesterday did not ask segregation of the St. Lawrence waterway and some 38 other defense projects listed in the bill from other omnibus provisions and leaders indicated the measure will be carried to the floor the week of February 23 in its present form.

But to meet "pork" charges aimed at some nondefense projects, Chairman Mansfield will offer a committee amendment in line with Administration objectives to postpone the construction of projects not held to be essential to defense, until six months after the end of the war.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Mansfield, dated February 10, was read to the House by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi. It said that "at this time it is important that every phase of production contributory to the Nation's armament be prosecuted with the utmost dispatch."

In Interest of Security

With regard to the projects added, it said:

"The bill in question authorizes improvements in the interest of national security and the stabilization of employment and provides that the projects authorized shall be prosecuted as speedily as may be considered consistent with budgetary requirements. It is pertinent to point out that the proposed legislation is merely an authorization. It is extremely important, however, that authorizing legislation be expedited in order that Appropriation Committees of Congress may provide without delay for projects urgently needed on account of the war emergency."

Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, leading one opposition group, said the committee amendment will not lessen opposition to the $197,921,000 Florida ship canal, the 66-million-dollar Tombigbee waterway, the $48,170,000 Beaver-Mahoning canal, the St. Lawrence seaway itself, "or any project of unproven defense value."

Beiter said two more signatures, those of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Representative Boggs (Democrat), of Louisiana, had been added to the letter calling a bipartisan conference. Ten members originally signed the call. He said it was not the duty of a member to support a measure offered in the name of national defense if he was convinced in his own mind it would not serve that purpose.

Bridge Parties Will Benefit Blood Banks

The relationship between bridge-playing and life-saving will be closer than it seems tonight.

The Army and Navy Club and the University Club will be holding their annual bridge benefits for the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank. Both are expected to have capacity turnouts.

Also scheduled for tonight is the annual Lincoln's Birthday dinner of Lincoln Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 17, American Legion, whose proceeds will go into the hospital fund. It will be held at the legion clubhouse, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

Agriculture Auxiliary Unit No. 36, of which Mrs. Pearl Heagerty is president, yesterday contributed $10 to the fourth annual campaign, sponsored by the Washington Bridge League, American Legion and The Post. Several other posts and legions are planning to hold benefit parties.

The drive for funds to maintain the hospital's transfusion and serum services will be the subject of a radio talk by Dr. Joseph Wall, chief of staff, on WJSV at 9:30 a. m. Saturday. Programs also are scheduled on WWDC at 4:30 p. m. today and WINX at 8:05 p. m. tomorrow.

Extension of Street Light Services Ordered

A half-hour extension of street light services in the mornings was ordered by the Commissioners yesterday.

To accommodate some 50,000 Federal and private workers who are now forced to go to work along darkened streets, the city heads instructed that all street lamps be kept lighted until daybreak.

Regulations now require that the lights be extinguished a half-hour before dawn. The sun rose yesterday at 8:05 a. m.

The new schedule will become effective as soon as minor contract details can be worked out with the Potomac Electric Power Co., said Commissioner Guy Mason. Assistant Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz has been assigned to work out the new program.

"It will cost the District money," said Mason, "but it will be worth it to protect our citizens."

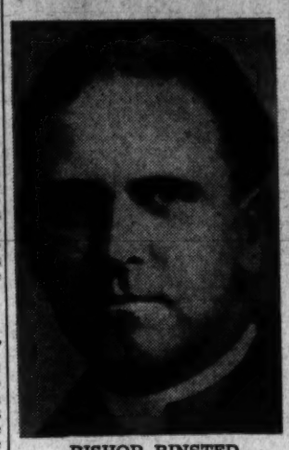
Mother Fears For Bishop In Philippines

MRS. BINSTED



BISHOP BINSTED

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

In her home at 5210 Sherrier Place Northwest, Mrs. Thomas W. Binsted yesterday anxiously awaited word from her son, the Right Rev. Norman Spencer Binsted, recently named Episcopalian Bishop of the Philippines, where he has been bishop-in-charge for a year.

The now bishop, whose formal appointment to the Philippine post was made at the recent meeting of the House of Bishops at Jacksonville, Fla., was brought here at the age of two from Canada. He was educated at Western High School and Virginia Theological Seminary, and in 1921 and 1922 was vicar of St. David's Chapel, then at Conduit near Chain Bridge Road.

Mrs. Binsted told The Post yesterday that last word came from her son early last fall, shortly after he and other missionaries were asked to leave Japan, some going to the Philippines. The prelate was for many years missionary bishop of Tohoku, Japan.

Letters since sent to the bishop here have been returned undelivered, according to Mrs. Binsted, whose husband lies ill in Georgetown Hospital. Several of the bishop's brothers live here. They are Leonard Binsted, 5 Conduit Road Northwest and Percy G. Binsted, 5231 Sherrier Place. Another brother is the Rev. John Binsted, pastor of the Baptist Church at Accomac, Va.

The late Right Rev. Alfred Harding, second Bishop of Washington, ordained the now bishop to the diaconate of the Episcopal Church in 1915 at the Washington Cathedral. Mr. Binsted was ordined to the priesthood in Japan a year later. During a furlough in 1921 and 1922, he conducted services in St. David's here.

His last visit home, according to his mother, was in September, 1940. The last letter received from Bishop Binsted indicated that his wife was with him, according to Mrs. Binsted.

The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Mount Saint Albans, "mother" church of St. David's, yesterday, also expressed concern for the safety of his "St. David's boy," as he described him.

It was largely through Dr. Warner's inspiration that Norman Spencer Brinsted entered the ministry.

of invading Japanese planes was considered "a good augury."

On patrol over the Java Sea when the raiders appeared, the Dutch fighters tore into them and chased them back. Not one bomber reached Soerabaja.

Although spared from another air assault, the peril to Soerabaja was heightened by new Japanese landings on Celebes Island, 500 miles to the northeast, and there also were reports of Japanese reconnaissance flights over northern Sumatra and western Java, presumably to spot airdromes and map invasion routes.

Today's communique said Japanese forces had landed at not only Macassar, important commercial port near the bottom of the west coast of Celebes and about 500 miles northeast of Soerabaja, but also at Balangnipa and Djemeponto.

Balangnipa is about 60 miles east of Macassar on the eastern coast of the island's southwest arm. Warships and planes based there could control the long coastline of Bone Gulf as well as threaten Timor and other islands east of Java.

The small defense forces on Celebes still were resisting the enemy vigorously, as were those impeding the Japanese overland drive southward in Borneo from Balik Papan toward Bandjermasin.

The Australians said enemy planes bombed Samarai on the southeast coast of Papua.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot Heads Merged Civil Defense Units

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, red-haired wife of Pennsylvania's former Governor, yesterday was named head of the combined emergency feeding and housing units of the District Defense Council.

The units were combined in accordance with instructions from national OCD offices, Defense Coordinator John Russell Young said when announcing Mrs. Pinchot's appointment, but their functions will remain the same and the Red Cross will continue to be in charge of both housing and feeding "beyond the immediate emergency levels."

Randolph Bishop, who has organized the housing unit to its present status, will remain in the division as billeting officer. Mary Mason who has been in charge of emergency feeding organization, will remain on the job until training of approximately 2500 women volunteers is completed and then be assistant to Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy.

Mrs. Pinchot, who is a member of the civilian defense volunteer participation committee for the third OCD region—made up of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia—said last night she would establish headquarters today at 134, Maryland Avenue Northeast, renovated firehouse in which Chief Murphy has offices.

She said that to date she has been billeting officer for the four blocks encompassing the Pinchot home at 1615 Rhode Island Avenue, in the Dupont Circle defense area, and has also carried on some defense work in Pennsylvania.

Bishop said the housing unit has a total volunteer personnel of around 2200 men and women, with 235 zone officers. Surveys are under way in nearly all sectors, he said, with reports from the first ten completed showing more than 15,000 billets available in just the ten zones.

Mrs. Pinchot, whose bright hair and smart costumer are noticeable at many a Congressional hearing, has been a national figure for many years. She was an ardent suffragist and one of Mrs Carrie Chapman Catt's chief lieutenants.

Although born to wealth, she is "liberal" in her ideas and has been described as a consistent champion of the "underdog." She has marched in picket lines and has been outspoken in her condemnation of "sweatshops."

D. C. Man Found Hanged in Mt. Alto Hospital Ward

Mr. Leary entered the hospital last January 26 because of a heart ailment. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Norma Lucille Leary, and a daughter, Norma, 11, of 4311 Cathedral Avenue Northwest.

Mr. Leary was a son of the late Brig. Gen. Peter Leary and served as an infantry captain in the Spanish-American War.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow from the Chambers Georgetown funeral home, 3072 M Street Northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

WHITTLESEY

Several summers ago five little kids who averaged about 13 years of age, were called to the basketball court during a clinic in New York and were told to work the ball in against a zone defense. The opposition to these sun-burned tykes was the national championship college team of the previous winter season from Temple University; big, husky, hardened veterans, undisputed rulers of the game.

The skinny-legged youngsters, without a moment's hesitation, took the ball at the far end of the court and, with the finesse of a crack high school club, worked the sphere down court. They advanced past the middle of the floor, an odd sight as they could all have practically run between the legs of the Templars, and started zipping the ball around.

It was just a demonstration for a group of basketball coaches who were completing their physical education courses. Nobody had an idea the kids could prove anything against Temple but suddenly Meigs Reilly, who is only 5-feet-6 today, cut in with the ball, zipped a pass to Mike Tighe, another State Islander, and the latter dropped a back-hand field goal through the cords. The Temple team was dumfounded.

On the bench the partly-bald instructor of the kids, a man with a thousand court experiences, had just realized his greatest thrill.

At least, that's the way Elmer Ripley felt about it yesterday as he moved moodily around the Georgetown University athletic office, the memory temporarily quieting the pains of the Hoyas' drubbing at the hands of St. Joseph's Tuesday night in Philadelphia. "Rip" takes every beating hard and the St. Joe game was no exception.

One of those kids, the oldest of the group, was Rip's star in defeat against St. Joe. His name is Buddy O'Grady, a likeable little Irishman who handles a basketball like he would a half-dollar. He has a half-dozen ball-handling tricks which continually amaze the opposition as well as the spectators. He's the smoothest youngster with the big round ball seen in these parts for some time.

Two others will play in Georgetown uniforms tonight, not on the varsity but as freshmen, boys with three years as Hoya varsity ahead. Another just left school. The other is playing pro ball in New York, sporting a 17-point-a-game average.

The same Meigs Reilly and Lloyd Pottolicchio will lead the frosh. Mike Tighe will be lending moral support, as a former Hoya, while Lon Cummisky is the absentee, now a pro.

Ripley was good-will ambassador for a major sporting goods company at the time of the aforementioned incident. His job was to travel through the East, South and Midwest during the school vacation months, giving demonstrations on approved basketball. He found it was a tough job teaching others with players who were cold to his style, so Rip banded these five youngsters together and took them along.

They were all playground boys in New York, who had been handling a basketball since they were strong enough to lift one. They toured half the country in Rip's car, amazing coaches and instructors with their ability despite their size and youth. They all had countless college offers, through Rip, before they even played on a high school varsity. When Ripley returned to Georgetown all but Cummisky followed him to the Hilltop. O'Grady, the oldest, is through this year, as he is a senior. Reilly and Pottolicchio are stars on the Hoya frosh who have swept through 12 games unbeaten, averaging 60 points a game and winning all by a dozen points or more. Kraus helped them through half the schedule and may be back before the season is over.

Ripley took five youngsters for three years but only Reilly and Tighe played all three. They prepped for college in New York schools. Reilly gained all-New York City Catholic honors.

For partners on this year's freshman team, Reilly, Pottolicchio and Kraus have Billy Hasset, called the outstanding player in the Glens Falls Invitation Tournament, and Andy Kostecka, who smashed all-New Jersey prep scoring recordings last year.

Last summer, while Ripley was instructing at a New York boys' camp with Les MacMitchell, the great miler, as his assistant, he entered Kraus, Hassett, Pottolicchio and Reilly, along with three members of this yera's varsity, Charley Schmidli, O'Grady and Ken Engles in the A. A. U. tournament on Long Island, as the Staten Island Hoyas. The boys reached the finals while such teams as Long Island and St. Francis, of New York, in their entirety, were knocked out.

Next year, if the boys are allowed to remain in school by the draft, they will be sophomores and Hoya varsity men. That is what Rip is looking forward to.

He has only one sore spot in his years of association with these Metropolitan New York youngsters. One week, a particularly tough one in their clinic schedule, they ate $200 worth of food. But Rip will consider it a good investment if they come through next year.

On the Line

SPORTIN' AROUND IN WASHINGTON:

The President has ordained that the parasites must leave Washington, but none of them seems to have taken the hint.

Railroad trains arriving in Washington still look like the Bronx express on the way to a Yankee double-header.

CONSIDINE

The Capital, now, is like Louisville with a perpetual Kentucky Derby. The place is rife with hot tips on priorities and night-long speculations on what Henderson, Nelson and Mr. Big are going to do next.

To get a hotel room you must have a letter from your pastor, or you must know Melvyn Douglas and Senator Wild Bill Lyons.

Personally, I'm sleeping counter-clockwise this week with an inventor of a new sneeze-powder bomb, who can't get an appointment with the Ordnance division until next June; an old line Republican who wants to know how much Churchill's grocery bill amounted to, and three small business men who are here to ask if they can manufacture percolators on days when the Government isn't using the stuff for propellors. We're waiting for the house detective to introduce us, then I can complain about the cracker crumbs.

Since December 7 there have been more uniforms around town than Pinkertons around the pari-mutuel satchel at Belmont. The buttons and braid, if laid end to end, or melted down, would make the first 18-carat pocket battleship in history. But, all in all, it's a comforting sight.

Well, Buddy, Where's My Commission?

The town's a little like a village on the verge of a big fight, too. The pass line has formed. There isn't much difference between it and the pass line that hangs out in front of Mike Jacob's office. It, too, is looking for a handout. But what they want down here is a commission.

Most of the blokes in line are about to be drafted, anyway, so in a burst of patriotism that must be causing much revolving in the graves of John Paul Jones and U. S. Grant, the boys have graciously offered to accept cushy positions which must be saluted.

Prominent in the line, we might hasten to add, are a lot of lower case journalists who seem to think that they have some peculiar gifts as officers.

Cappy Wells, the old West Point football publicity officer, now Lieut. Col. Wells, has encountered untold numbers of them in his public relations office in the Munitions Building, but showed wonderful restraint until recently when he personally ran out a punk who presented a few paragraphs he had had published in a college paper on intramural badminton—and demanded a major's oak leaves.

And How to Get a Good Job

A fellow walked into the Navy Department the other day—that is, he got past the bayoneted guard and the front desk after an hour or two—and asked for an application blank for a commission. The weary officer behind the desk finally asked him the name of the Senator who was going to plug for him. The applicant said he didn't know any Senators. Then the officer said, resignedly, "well, then, what Congressman have you got on your side?" The guy said he didn't know any Congressman; that he didn't know one influential person. He just wanted to serve.

He got his commission immediately.

It was disturbing to hear the rumor that the President, owing to pressure of business, might stop his press conferences. Such a move should be blocked, if possible, by Jack Kelly, sports editor of the Civilian Defense Office. If not, a lot of Americans will go to seed. For the only exercise the Washington correspondents have been getting for years is at the White House press conferences. The journalists line up in front of the closed door that leads into the President's study, like a crowd waiting to get at the hot-dog counter at the Army-Navy game. And when at last the door is flung open, they jam into the room with a fearful pushing, shoving rush that has kept many of them in perfect muscular condition since the Administration of Teddy Roosevelt.

Columbus' Second Half Spurt Beats C. U.

Scanlan's Absence Hurts Cardinals; Columbus Leads 22-19 at Halftime

Columbus University came out in the second half with 13 consecutive points before Catholic U. was able to score and finally buried the Cardinals under a 49-29 total in an intra-city battle last night in the loser's gym.

The scrappy little C. U. five, much shorter, younger and playing without the services of their star player, Dick Scanlan, the leading scorer in the Mason-Dixon Conference, gave the Explorers a fight in the first half but could not hold out.

Columbus was behind 8-2 at one time on the first half as Freddy Rice, jr., C. U.'s southpaw dribbler and Archie Panago each tossed in a pair of field goals, but Columbus tied it up at 10-all when Acky Viana hit on a hot hand and Acky then potted one from mid-court for 12-10 and the Explorers were ahead to stay.

The favored Columbus club was hard pressed for its 22-19 advantage at halftime but in the final period the hosts were outclassed and did not socre until O'Brien swished a set shot after 12 minutes of play to bring the score to 35-21.

Viana, the stocky guard who made his reputation in sandlot basketball, finished with 18 points, six field goals and six out of nine foul

Terps' Travis Scores 13 Points; Victory Is Fourth For Navy Five

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11.—Navy's basketballers leveled their biggest guns against the University of Maryland today and Literally blasted the Southern Conference cagers off the court while romping to a 61 to 47 triumph.

Navy's Bill Busik and John (Moose) McTighe stole the spotlight from the Terps' rangy scoring ace, Ernie Travis, who tallied only 13 points to Busik's 20, and McTighe's 15. Busik, McTighe and Center Pat Patrick were responsible for a late first half spurt which gave Navy a 33 to 25 haltime advantage.

The victory was the Middies' second in a row and their fourth in seven games this season. Maryland's loss was its eleventh in 18 starts.

Although the Midshipmen were successful in partially checking Travis, who ran his individual scoring string to 246 points today, they had considerable trouble with Ernie's speedy running mates, Tom Mont and Earle Duval. Mont caged 13 tallies and Duval, who played a spectacular floor game, came up with 10 for Maryland.

Duel Ensues

During the first ten minutes of play, the battle resolved into a point-making duel between Busik and Travis. At one stage, the Middies led 14 to 12 and all except two of Navy's points were fashioned by the versatile Busik.

Travis found himself completely bottled in the second canto, scoring only one field goal. However, Navy's "big three" kept right on going and kept the Terps at least 10 points or more behind throughout the final eight minutes of play.

Busik eventually left the game on personals but even then the Terps could not cope with the Navy Reserves who were rushed into the contest near the end.

The tussle was marred by 31 personal fouls, Navy offending 17 times to Maryland's 14. Navy's effective defense checked the Terps' fast break in the last half while the Middies' ability to nab enemy rebounds played no little part in their triumph.

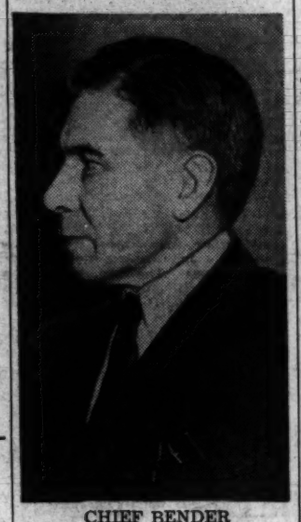
Chief Bender Joins Yankee Club as Scout



CHIEF BENDER

By International News Service

Newark, N. J., Feb. 11.—Charles "Chief" Bender, famous Chippewa hurler of Connie Mack's old Athletics, has been signed as roving scout of pitchers in the New York Yankee farm system, George Weiss, general manager of the Yankee chain, announced today.

The chief will go South with the Newark Bears on March 10 and divide his time between the Bears' camp at Sebring, Fla., and the Kansas City headquarters at Lake Wales, coaching the young moundsmen with these two clubs who hope some day to land with the Yanks.

Bender later will pay visits to the Yankee farm clubs elsewhere about the Nation, giving individual attention to every Yankee mound prospect.

West Virginia Five Trounces Army, 57-40

By the Associated Press

West Point, Feb. 11.—Bettering its seasonal 53-point per game average, the touring West Virginia University basketball team routed Army here today, 57-40, for its seventh win in a row and its ninth in ten starts.

The Cadets led by as much as eight points during the first half, but finished that period on the short end of a 32-23 count as the Mountaineers racked up nine points in the final minutes of play.

In the second half, Army crept up slowly to slice West Virginia's lead to three points, 39-36, with ten minutes still to play, but the visitors, led by Capt. Rudy Baric and Floyd Hamilton, pulled away with ease. Baric netted 17 points for the afternoon's work, and Hamilton accounted for 16.

The victory was West Virginia's second in eight games with West Point. The Mountaineers last upended Army in 1929.

Great Lakes Courtmen Beat Lake Forest, 40-26

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Playing its third game in three days the Great Lakes Naval Training Station basketball team today defeated Lake Forest College, 40 to 26. Frank Baumholz, formerly of Ohio University, dropped in five baskets to lead the sailors' scoring.

Tonight the sailors, who have chalked up 28 victories in 32 games, left for Seattle, Wash., to play the University of Washington on February 16.

Wes Ferrell, Manush, Lenahan Tied at 72 in Baseball Golf

Trio of Former Big Leaguers Fire Par Rounds In Annual Play; Simmons, Waner in Tie for 2d

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11.—Three former big leaguers carded par 72's today to take the lead as 30 baseball players ran the gamut—from eagles to 9's—in the first round of their championship golf tournament.

Heinie Manush, one-time American League batting champion; Wes Ferrell, who saw service with several major league clubs, and Ray Lenahan, a pitcher with Pittsburgh for part of the 1918 season, wound up in a tie.

A typical diamond argument arose during the playoffs for a medal prize—won by Lenahan with a birdie four on the first extra hole—when Ferrell suddenly raised the question of Lenahan's eligibility, but the argument ended just where it started.

Other players pointed out that Lenahan had every right to participate because of his service not only with Pittsburgh, but for three years with Springfield of the Eastern League.

In fourth place was Merv Shea, Detroit Tigers' coach and the defending champion, with a 38, 35—73, while Paul Derringer, the Cincinnati Reds' towering pitcher, was next with 37, 38—75.

The title will be decided on the basis of 54 holes of medal play, the second and final rounds to be played tomorrow and Friday.

Manush, now manager of the Greensboro club in the Piedmont League, carded 35, 37—72. Ferrell, who piloted the Leaksville nine in the Bistate League last year, turned in a 37, 35—72. Lenahan, operator of a Providence, R. I., men's clothing store, had 35, 37—72

More Playing, Less Panic, Says Griffith

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten conference athletic director, offered a wartime slogan today: "Play Instead of Getting Panicky."

Speaking before the National Greenkeeping Superintendents Association, Griffith said the public needed recreation and that athletics had contributed to the war effort by developing discipline, resourcefulness and physical fitness.

He predicted a boom both during and after the war in "participant sports."

Johnstown Blue Birds Defeat Orioles Six, 7-4

Baltimore, Feb. 11 (AP).—The Johnstown Bluebirds cracked down in an overtime period and won a 7-to-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game tonight.

The match was roughly played, 16 penalties being called.

Coach Dick Hanley Called by Marines

Terps' Frosh Boxers Down Western Md.

University of Maryland's freshman boxing team closed its season yesterday by pounding out a 6½-to-1½ victory over Western Maryland's representatives, who were making their 1942 debut. It was the second bout for the Terrapins, who opened up with a 4-4 tie with Virginia.

The Old Liners, scoring one clean knockout and three of the technical variety, won five of the eight classes, with one bout, the first at 120 pounds, being a draw. Western Maryland scored one technical knockout.

Quickest of all the contests was the heavyweight, in which Maryland's highly touted Walter Nechey, 187 pounds, stopped Joe Kugler, 190 pounds, in 58 seconds of the first round.

127-POUND—Basil Kamboruis (Maryland) decisioned Bill Sires.

135-POUND—Frank Paushman (Western Maryland) decisioned Leon Goldberg.

'Fats' Ellinger, Army Football Coach, Dies

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Harry Oscar (Fats) Ellinger, an assistant football coach at the United States Military Academy, who died today at the age of 39, had a heart that carried him to gridiron glory but wouldn't permit him to become an officer, it was recalled here tonight.

Ellinger was found dead in bed this morning in Alexandria, Va. The discovery was made by his host, Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, when Hebert went to his room to call him.

A star guard on Army's football team for four years, Ellinger was graduated from the Academy in 1925, but failed to get his commission because his heart would not pass the rigid Army tests.

In 1928, he became the Army line coach and served until 1933 under three different head coaches—Biff Jones, Ralph Sasse and Gar Davidson.

Blaik returned to West Point as head Coach last season, bringing Ellinger and the rest of his Dartmouth staff with him.

Appointed to West Point from the Pennsylvania National Guard, Ellinger also played four years of baseball and was captain of the team in his first class year. He was a cadet lieutenant and a rifle and pistol sharpshooter in his cadet days.

"Big Poison" Still Potent

P. Waner Needs Only 44 Hits To Enter Exclusive '3000 Club'

Little Outfielder With Braves in 16th Year in Big Leagues

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—Paul Waner, the little guy known from coast to coast as "Big Poison," is nearing the end of baseball's trail but before he is through he may achieve one of the rarest of all hitting honors.

He needs only 44 hits this year to bring his life-time total to 3000 and enter a select society which has but six other members—Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Hans Wagner, Eddie Collins, Napoleon Lajoie and Cap Anson.

Waner, who will be 39 years old April 16, will be wearing the livery of the Boston Braves this spring although 15 of his previous 16 seasons in the National League were spent with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Crack Golfer

In those earlier days when he and his brother, Lloyd, were shooting their poisoned darts past the infielders with aggravating accuracy Paul twice won the National League batting championship, batted over .300 for a dozen years and collected more than 200 hits in eight different seasons, ultimately totaling 2956.

Waner has slowed down a lot in the last couple of years. He never liked the strict training routine demanded by baseball and he gave himself tirelessly in the off season to other sports—deep-sea fishing, hunting and golf, at which he became one of the best lefthanded players in America. He has kept lean and tanned, but his muscles have lost most of their spring.

The result was that Pittsburgh released him unconditionally at the end of the 1940 season and the Brooklyn Dodgers, who took him on last spring, turned him loose three weeks after the season opened.

He finished the year with the Braves, and although his batting average slipped to .267, he continued to be a troublesome person for a pitcher to face in a pinch. He got into 106 games last year and is almost certain to see considerable service for Casey Stengel again this season.

It should be easy for him to get those 44 hits somewhere along the way, and when he does he will have accomplished something Rogers Hornsby, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and many other famous hitters failed to do.

Cobb made 4191 hits; Speaker, 3515; Wagner, 3430; Collins, 3313; Lajoie, 3242, and Anson, 3081. Sam Rice, of the Washington Nats, ended his string at 2987, and Hornsby at 2930. Now that Al Simmons and Charley Gehringer have retired from active service, Waner is the only player close to the mark.

Sun Eager Shakes Slump and Easily Wins Hialeah Feature

$19.90 Shot Outdistances Field of Six

Wins by 4 Lengths Over Cash Basis as Alaking Takes 3d; 10,456 See Program

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 11.—That good fortune at the races runs in cycles again was demonstrated here today. Mrs. Alice F. Sherman's stable is the latest to come under the charm. The New York establishment's American Wolf defeated Alsab and others in Saturday's Bahamas Handicap and today Sun Eager, shaking loose from a slump with a display of sudden improvement, easily took feature honors in the Grade "B" Handicap.

Sun Eager, a $19.90-for-$2 shot in the field of six, romped to the wire four lengths on top, completing the mile-and-a-furlong distance in 1:50 3-5. he Howe Stable's Cash Basis was second by two lengths, with C. F. Nelson's Alaking third. City Talk, the favorite, was a poor fourth.

Warren Mehrtens, drawing away from Willie Day in the local apprentice standing, earned a double on Sun Eager. Mrs. Sherman's 4-year-old carried only 100 pounds, while the dull running Allessandro was topweight of the field at 115. Sun Eager is not a Widener Handicap candidate.

Those in the crowd of 10,456 who backed Cash Basis, a recent winner, received encouragement when that fellow dashed into a daylight advantage over Sun Eager. The latter, due to poor recent form, was not expected to hang around long, but he surprised by sticking to his task and finally collaring the leader inside the last furlong. He coasted thereafter.

Selections at Hialeah

Eighteen fillies and mares of the age of 3 and upward have been named with Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan for the $5000 added Evening Handicap of 7 furlongs, a stake which will highlight Saturday's program.

With the thought of encouraging the development of first class of the so-called "weaker sex," the Miami Jockey Club has instituted two stakes restricted to fillies and mares of which the Evening is the first on schedule. The Black Helen is slated for Monday, March 2, at 1 mile and a furlong and has a lucrative value of $10,000 added. Both races commemorate the names of two fillies that have made turf history, not only in Hialeah but elsewhere and against the best of their age, regardless of sex. The Evening was named in honor of George D. Widener's daughter of St. James—Cropuscule. Evening won the Florida Derby (now the Flamingo Stakes) in 1932. Jockey Johnny Gilbert was in the saddle and he defeated Cathop and Trombone. Later in the year at Havre de Grace, Evening was returned the winner of the Chesapeake Stakes at the expense of Stepenfetchit, Over Time and others. Retired to the stud she produced Your Chance, winner of the Dwyer Stakes, the Huron Stakes and the Suburban Handicap. All of the better fillies now stabled at Hialeah have been named for this year's renewal of the Evening. Among them are the stake winners, Sweet Willow, Cis Marion, Cute Trick, Pretty Pet, Pig Tails and Inscoelda, and the good winners Dark Discovery, Belle Poise, Transient, One Jest, Sister Union, Kasidah, Button Hole and Sylvestra. Saturday's renewal will mark the second running of the Evening, inaugurated in 1941 on February 28. Thirteen started. The winner turned up in the Woodvale Farm's Dorimar. In a stirring struggle, the fine daughter of Man o'War—Neshaminy, came from seventh position in the stretch to win by a neck from Jeanne d'Arch, another Man o'War offspring, with Silvestra third. Dorimar proved her class by climaxing the year's racing with a smashing victory in the historic Saratoga Cup at the expense of such notables as Fenelon, Fairymant, Welcome Pass and others.

BILL.

First race—NOVEMBER is reported to be a fair juvenile and I'm going to put him on the top of this field of maidens. FOUR LEAF has speed and is dangerous. LIQUID LUNCH to take care of the minor award.

Second race—BRAVE SIR gets a good figure in this company. Likes the three-quarter sprint route and I'm going to string along. MACKS MISS gets in with feather weight and is a threat. INSCOGERT to account for the show.

Third race—HERE NOW is better than shown recently and is going to surprise this gang, I do believe. GRENADIER has early foot and should be in the thick of contention. CASUAL PLAY belongs in the first flight.

Fourth race—DISPLAYER has whipped good ones recently and is the speed of the party. Needs only the right handling. KANSAS CITY has been rounding into form and is dangerous. THE CHIEF will close ground, but needs a longer distance.

Fifth race—I'm going to take a shot at a long one in this. HORN had trouble last out and could take it all with clear sailing. BY CONSCRIPT was off poorly the last time. FIGGERITOUT for the minor money.

Sixth race—CAPE GOD is a fit horse and goes a route he likes. Gets light weight and will have Wall up. I look for him to take the measure of PICTOR, which may need racing. SIR MARLBORO should get in the cash circle.

Seventh race—HIGH PLAID appears the best suited of those platers gathered for this event. Meade should supply the right ride. CHALLANTE is a doubtful starter, but will be a factor if in action. WOODVALE LASS to show.

Eighth race—BUNNY BABY may take the top and hold the lead all the way in this field. I'm going to be there. IDA ROGERS and JEFFERSONTOWN to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—High Plaid.

Bears Again Defeat Pro Champ Eagles

In a clean, fast game played before a capacity crowd, the undefeated Lichtman Bears defeated the defending world pro champion Detroit Eagles, 68-48, last night at Turner's Arena.

Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, brilliant Bear forward, with a total of 25 points, 11 in the first period, 8 in the second and 6 in the final, was the individual star of the game until taken out with a twisted knee.

As in the previous game played two weeks ago the Bears did not permit the Eagle forwards, Parry and Widowitz, to make a basket. Pop Gates, in usual form, with the customary broad grin on his face, took second honors with 18 points to his credit.

The demon guards who handcuffed the champions, keeping them on the short end of the score throughout, were Dolly King, former Long Island University captain, and Johnny Isaacs.

The big Eagle center, Ahearn, who proved such poison when here before, was held fairly safe by Tarzan Cooper, but the 17 points made by Kasperick were due in good measure to Ahearn's handling of the ball. The Bears, having defeated the champions twice, proclaimed that they are calling on the Renaissance and other outstanding teams for an immediate showdown, either here or in the national tournament. Meanwhile, a tournament of considerable proportions, is being organized for the Arena.

Hutson Gets National League Most Valuable Award for '42

Great Pass Receiver Polls Six of Nine First Place Votes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Don Hutson, Green Bay's sensational pass receiver, today was named the National Football League's most valuable player for 1941.

The selection was made by a committee of nine newspapermen who gave him six of the nine first place votes. Danny Fortmann, the Chicago Bear's heavy duty guard and defensive field general, did not receive a first team vote, but wound up second to Hutson on the basis of second place balloting.

Hutson's selection climaxed an outstanding year for the 23-year-old former Alabama player who was named on the all-league team for the fifth time and who during the season brought to 11 the number of league records he holds or shares.

He made 12 touchdowns last season, 10 on passes; scored 98 points and tied the record of 58 passes caught in one season. Added to his accomplishments in the previous six seasons, this gave him a total of 57 touchdowns and 386 points, both new league marks.

Hutson is the fourth played to receive the Joe F. Carr trophy, emblematic of the most valuable award. Others were Mel Hein of New York, 1938; Parker Hall of Cleveland, 1939, and Ace Parker of Brooklyn, 1940.

Eight men received votes in the 1941 balloting. Cecil Isbell, the other half of the famed Green Bay aerial combination, got two first team votes, and Sid Luckman, Bear quarterback, the other first.

Other players mentioned were Pug Manders of Brooklyn, the 1941 ground gaining champion; Norm Standlee, the Bears rookie fullback, Frank Kinard, Brooklyn tackle, and Sammy Baugh, Washington's ace passer and punter.

Duquesne Brings Formidable Record; Southern Conference Game Is Important

The District will have its first double-dish of major college basketball of the season tonight as Georgetown entertains Duquesne, one of the East's better clubs at Riverside Stadium and George Washington resumes its Southern Conference competition against Furman at Tech gym.

Both games are set for 8:45 starting times. It is the first time the Hoyas and Colonials have conflicted on home dates since they started playing games at Riverside.

The Hoya-Dukes clash is the headline attraction as the Pittsburghers come here with three members of last year's club, which won 17 of 19 games, Bill Goggin, Stan Noszka and Joe Penzelik. Two sophomores, Sam Fowle and Joe Camic round out the starting club.

Coached by the colorful Chick Davis, who for 17 years has been worrying the opposition, the officials and probably his own players with his constant chanting from the bench, the Duquesne club will be after its fifth victory in as many court meetings with the Hoyas.

Duquesne lost its third game of the season Monday night to Long Island, having also lost to Bradley Tech and Geneva, the latter in overtime. The Dukes also beat Bradley in the Peoria gym, only the second time in three seasons the Braves have lost at home, and they number West Virginia, Wyoming and Oregon among their victims.

O'Grady Improves

Georgetown has come up with the most unpredictable club in many years. The Hoyas have won six and lost seven, but are either very good or very, very bad. They beat both Colgate and Marquette on a road trip last week and lost to Syracuse, although playing their best game of the trip. Then Tuesday they were humbled by St. Joseph's, in Philadelphia, trailing by 25 points at one time.

Buddy O'Grady, the captain and ball handler par excellence of the Hoyas, has developed into their star scorer of late, while Al Lujack, who joined the team after getting the football kinks out, will be making his first appearance at home in the starting line-up. The bruising Lujack has proven a valuable addition to the squad and gives Bill Bonheimer and Kenny Engles lost of help in handling the rebounds. Don Martin, the most underrated man in the Hoya line-up, and Charley Schmidli will be in there, with Danny Gabbianelli and Engles on hand for reserve duty. Engles may be out, due to the serious illness of his mother.

The Hoya frosh will be out for No. 13 against a combination of the American U. frosh and jayvees in a preliminary at 7:15, while Parochial League representatives from Sacred Heart and St. Martin's will play between halves of the varsity and frosh games.

W. C. Solodare, of New York, and Paul Menton, Baltimore, will handle the officiating.

Furman Formidable

George Washington may meet its match in Furman, which is a full game ahead of the Colonials in the conference standings with five victories and two defeats against three and two for the Colonials. G. W., ninth place team in the standings to date, needs tonight's game to move into contention for one of the eight play-off berths to the Southern Conference tournament.

Coach Bob Smith's Furman Hurricane has beaten Clemson and The Citadel twice and South Carolina in the Conference race.

The Colonials beat Furman twice last year, the second time by only one pint in the Furman gym. The visitors will average better than 6 feet, with sophomore Slim McCrary, 6 feet 6, the tallest.

Bobby Groetzinger will likely take Ed Gustafson's place in the starting line-up for G. W. With Roy McNeil, Joey Gallagher, Bobby Gilham and the one and only Matt Zunic.

Eagles Release Tom McCormack

The release of Tommy McCormack, popular center and winger, from the roster of the Washington Eagles, was announced yesterday by Coach Redvers Mackenzie as he primed the defending champions for tomorrow night's final 1941-42 Riverside Stadium invasion of the Baltimore Orioles, at 8:30 o'clock.

McCormack, plucky veteran who twice rejoined the team after being sidetracked by serious injury this season, was released after a conference with Mackenzie yesterday.

"Tommy McCormack and myself remain the best of friends," Mackenzie disclosed after the interview, "but I simply do not feel that he fits in with our style of play. I'll do everything I can to see that he's placed happily elsewhere."

G. U. Frosh Defeat Tech High Riflemen

Central Five Beaten, 41-37, By St. John's

St. John's High gained a 41-to-37 victory over Central High School yesterday after trailing virtually throughout the game at the Central gym. With two minutes remaining of play and St. John's behind, 37 to 36, Chuck Dudley sank a set shot which was followed by a two-pointer by Hughes.

Hughes, fouled on the play, sank the free throw and the final gun ended the game.

At the end of the first half Central held sway, 11 to 7. The intermission score was 23 to 22, with Central still in the van. Forward Hughes paced the winning attack with 18 points, while Mess and Thomaides managed for seven points apiece for the losers.

G. U. and C. U. Relay Teams Vie at Penn

Georgetown and Catholic Universities will send 1-mile relay teams to the Penn A. C. Games tomorrow night at Philadelphia.

The Hoya team will be the same quartet that won its division of the mile relay r es in the Millrose Games last week, only to be beaten out of the grand prize by one second by Fordham. The team comprises Jim Fish, Charley Williams, Hugh James and Hugh Short.

Coach Dorsey Griffith announced last night the C. U. team that will compete. The only change over the foursome that outdistanced Virginia and Bridgewater in a triangular meet last week will be Jimmy Zuppa's replacing of Joe Street. Zuppa, formerly a crack sprinter at Central High is being made into a sprinter and will run the second leg. Johnny Weschler will handle the anchor leg, Charley O'Keefe the lead-off spot, and Johnny Doyle the No. 2 slot.

Postoffice, Navy Fives Unbeaten

The City Postoffice and Navy Department teams are setting an unbeaten pace in the D. C. Recreation Government Basketball League standings. City Postoffice has won three games, Navy Department two.

City Postoffice, with Edgar Lee, a former Virginia Union star, scoring 19 points, won its last test by beating State Department, 66-23. Navy Department's last victory was over Treasury, 37-31.

The surprise team in the league, however, is neither of the two leaders but the rejeuvenated War Department squad which upset G. F. O., 33-32, with Newcomer Milt Robinson slipping in 19 points for the evening's scoring honors, and then beat State Department, 46-39.

Naval Torpedo Station captured its first league start in defeating Bureau of Engraving, 47-37.

Setter, Near Death in 1938, Makes Comeback in N. Y. Show

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Though he was practically a "dead duck" with distemper five years ago, dog fanciers are paying close attention to the Golden Belton English Setter, Daro of Maridor, in the Westminster Kennel Club show being held in New York

Daro of Maridor, Dog That 'Was Through,' Regains Best-in-Breed Title Won 5 Years Ago

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—A beautiful Golden Belton English setter, the dog that many canine fanciers said never would come back, showed up at Madison Square Garden today and promptly issued warning that he would be a strong contender for the top honors he won in 1938 as an 11-month-old puppy at the Westminster Kennel Club show.

Daro of Maridor is the name of this dog that went best-in-breed four years ago, nearly died from distemper soon afterwards and then purchased by Charles G. Dimon, of Roxbury, Conn., regained his winning form under the astute handling of Charlie Palmer. He never looked better than he did today as he paraded to the head of some 50 others of his breed.

The return of Daro to championship form adds another victory to the remarkable record of the four-dog litter, shown by Dwight Ellis' Maridor Kennels in 1938. That year the four puppies just about dominated the English setters. Two of them failed to keep pace but Maro went on to become the country's largest best-in-show winner the last two years under the banner of W. S. Kennedy, of Walled Lake, Mich.

Paths Never Crossed

Strangely enough the paths of Daro and Maro never have crossed since they were puppies. After recovering from distemper, Daro won a few minor best-in-show awards but could do no better than fourth in his breed on returning to the Westminster two years ago. Maro is not entered this year.

Daro's victory sending him in the group competition for sporting dogs, was the high spot of the opening session of the two-day exhibition bringing together over 2300 dogs of 89 different breeds.

Two of the three returning group winners attempted to repeat, but only Champion Cadet of Noranda, the collie owned by William H. Long, jr., of Hewlett Harbor, Long Island, succeeded. He was judged best of his breed to qualify for the group bringing together the working dogs.

William O. Bagshaw's Champion King Eric von Konigsbach, who came all the way from Hollywood, Calif., in quest of miniature pinscher honors and the right to represent the toy group in the finals, bowed to Mrs. Beatrice Clarke's Champion Nicodemus of Questover. Nicodemus' triumph was no surprise, however, as he was best of winers at the famous Norris and Essex 1941 show at the age of six months, and has led his breed in all his appearances except the first.

The Irish terriers sent up a strong threat for group honors in Harrison H. Spangler's Champion Fabian Triple Threat, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge, of Madison, N. J., who annually staged the Morris and Essex show until she canceled it this year, carried off two awards with representatives of her Giralda Farms. She showed the best English cocker spaniel in Champion Ttreetops Torador, and the top bloodhound in her perennial winner, Champion Brigadier of Renaltown.

Michigan State Routs Wolverines, 57-34; Jones Stars

By the Associated Press

East Lansing, Mich., Feb. 11.—With forward Dudley Jones blazing away for 25 points, Michigan State College routed the University of Michigan, 57 to 34, before 8300 spectators here tonight. The victory avenged an earlier 37-20 defeat by the Wolverines.

The Spartans took command midway in the opening period when Jones connected on three long shots to nudge State ahead, 8 to 4. Minutes later, Jones again quickly bagged six more points and the Spartans were on their way to an 18 to 8 advantage which they widened to 29 to 16 at the intermission.

The final score set a new record for Michigan State in its ancient series with the Wolverines. The most one-sided victory previously scored by the Spartans was a 45-23 decision in 1909.

St. Patrick Wins

St. Patrick's gained a 22-17 victory over the Roosevelt High Jayvees yesterday on the losers' court. John Sfarnas and Lawrence Phillippi each totaled eight points for the winners.

Post-Backed Table Tennis Still Growing

With 16 new entries received yesterday, The Washington Post-Government employes table tennis tournament at the Ice Palace starting Saturday at 3 o'clock continues to grow toward the point where it will be one of the largest ever held in the East.

D. C. Women Golfers Start Play in June

The executive committee of the District Women's Golf Association voted yesterday to move the start of its lengthy schedule from April to May and to postpone the opening team matches from April 15 to the first week in June. A shortage in caddies during the early spring months was the principal reason.

The women golfers also vetoed the suggestion of paying the professionals a flat rate for running the tournaments as the shortage in golf balls and mercnandise would make it impossible to buy prizes in the pro golf shops. They will buy as much as possible of the available stock, with the amount to the discretion of the prize committee.

Mrs. W. L. Weible, president of the association, sponsored a motion to award a defense bond of either $25 or $50 denomination from the treasury for each of the pro lady tournaments to be held during the season.

The association will abandon the use of budget books but the tournaments will be available to the players who compete in all events for the same price as last year.

The bonus tournament, held last year for the first time, with surplus funds of the prize committee, will not be held this year but the funds will be turned over to war relief organizations.

The committee approved a number of recent appointments for the 1942 season made by Mrs. Weible. They were: Rules, Mrs. H. A. Knox and Mrs. H. J. Simons in Class A and Mrs. Doran S. Platt and Mrs. John Barron in Class B; prizes, Mrs. Frank Mirth; year book, Mrs. W. D. Barkdull; auditing, Mrs. D. H. Henderson and Mrs. Marvin Wire; assistant team chairmen, Mrs. J. F. Gross and Mrs. T. O. Brandon, first team captain. Second and third team captains will be appointed when the number of competing teams is assured.

Georgetown Prep Defeats Gonzaga

Georgetown Prep's rapidly improving cagers won their eighth game in 12 starts yesterday as they avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of Gonzaga by downing the Purple, 54 to 39, at Garret Park.

Working smoothly behind the sharp shooting of Joe McAndrews, who scored 20 points, the Little Hoyas got off to a fast start and held a 32 to 21 edge at the intermission. The winners were ahead 17 to 4 at the first quarter and built a 43 to 29 margin at the three quarter mark.

McAndrews, one of the best players in the local scholastic ranks, was aided in the scoring column by John Showell and Ray Schneider who made 14 and 10 points, respectively. Franny Louck and Tony Tancredi shared scoring honors for the losers with 11 markers each.

The surprise win broke up a triple tie and gave the Little Hoyas the lead in the local Catholic Prep School League. Gonzaga's loss dropped it into the third slot and gave St. John's an undisputed second place.

Columbus U. Boxers Prime For Cardinals

The Columbus University ring team worked out with undimished fervor yesterday for the "big match" of the season with Catholic University Saturday night, despite the surprise beating suffered at the hands of a much underrated group of Florida boxers.

The Explorers had anticipated an easy time with the Floridians but instead were nipped 5 to 3 Monday night at Turners Arena after having given a splendid account of themselves. The bouts Saturday night will be at Catholic University.

Columbus sadly felt the loss of Lou Tuab, team cocaptain, who was drafted two days before the Florida match. The Explorers forfeited the 127-pound scrap as a result, whereas a Taub victory would have meant at least a draw for the locals. Coach Miller hopes to have this gap filled by Saturday.

Frank Cuddy will be in action again to engage Buddy Lynagh in the 155-pound event. Cuddy received a deep head cut in the Miami match and his bout was called "no-contest" by the referee. This head cut caused a last-minute reshuffling of the Columbus line-up against Florida with Coach Miller substituting Elmer Jacobsen, who was not in top condition, and after fighting two fast rounds, wilted fast in the final stanza.

J. M. Rountree Made Cashier Of Local Bank

James M. Rountree, former executive manager of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, has been elected vice president and cashier of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, it was announced yesterday by President F. G. Addison, jr.

Mr. Rountree

A native of Tennessee, Mr. Rountree was associated in the early years of his financial career in an executive capacity with the American National Bank of Nashville and later with the First National Bank of Tampa, Fla. From 1927 to 1932 he served as manager and director of building and loan associations in Nashville.

For two years, starting in 1933, he was general manager of the Federal savings and loan division of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. From 1935 to 1941 he was deputy to the vice chairman of the board of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, from which he took leave of absence to become executive manager of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

He is a member of the Columbia Country Club and president of the Tennessee State Society of Washington.

Mr. Rountree fills the position formerly held by the late T. Hunton Leith.

Wastepaper Drive Sets Collection Peak in Month

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—The national drive to gather wastepaper for war production of cardboard, the Wastepaper Conservation Commission said today, reached an all-time peak in January with collection of almost 5 pounds of paper for every person in the United States.

The commission, operating under Government guidance, said the collecting had been done principally by Boy Scouts, charitable agencies and housewives. Stressing the need for increased effort, it said:

"A single Sunday newspaper turned into cardboard would provide eight boxes for large caliber bullets, 15 dust-covers for airplane engines used in sandy regions, seven practice tragets, or a container for a shell large enough to knock the roof off any house in Tokyo."

The collection in Janury, the commission said, was 320,000 tons—640,000,000 pounds—of wastepaper as compared with 312,000 tons in December, 1941, and 232,000 tons in December, 1940.

Power Output Shows Contra-Seasonal Rise

New York, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Edison Electric Institute reported today electric power production in the United States rose against normal seasonal expectations to 3,474,-638,000 killowatt hours in the week ended Feb. 7, an increase of .2 of 1 per cent over the previous week and a gain of 16.2 over the comparable 1941 weeks.

The week before electric output was 3,468,193,000 killowatt hours and a year earlier was 2,989,392,000.

Metropolitan Tops 25 Billion In Insurance

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 11.—The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. set new records in the amount of insurance in force and the number of policyholders in 1941, Frederick H. Ecker, chairman, stated in his annual report.

A total of $25,433,226,148 of life insurance was in force at the end of the year, together with accident and health insurance providing $1,634,-617,475 principal sum benefits and $25,997.02 weekly benefits, all of which gave protection to more than 29,400,000 policyholders in the United States and Canada, the report said.

The company reported the lowest lapse rate in its history in 1941.

The total of paid-for life insurance issued by the company during 1941 amounted to $2,012,039,448. The 1941 issue, classified by departments was ordinary, $1,144,477,592; industrial, $649,356,789; and group, $218,-205,067; bringing the totals in force in each department to $12,915,903,113 ordinary, $7,698,263,468 industrial, and $4,819,059,567 group.

An increase of $290,255,559 in assets brought the company's assets to $5,648,047,196 at the end of 1941. This amount covers liabilities, including statutory policy reserves, of $5,189,988,752; special surplus funds of $7,190,000, unassigned funds (surplus) of $340,894,142, and reserve for dividends payable to policyholders in 1942 amounting to $109,974,302, a decrease of about $2,500,000 as compared with last year.

John Hancock Mutual Life

Boston, Feb. 11.—The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. passed the 5 billion dollar mark in insurance in force, President Guy W. Cox reported at stockholders annual meeting Monday. The company has more than 6,000,000 policyholders.

An increase of $464,746,466 in 1941, which compared with an increase of $263,139,806 in the previous year, brought the total insurance in force to $5,078,564,528, the highest amount in the company's history.

The gain in admitted assets was $112,128,733, making a total of $1,166,498,365. Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries in 1941 amounted to $99,267,900.27, or $329,-793.69 per business day.

Dividends on ordinary policies for 1942 will continue at the rate adopted in 1937. The amount set aside for the disbursement of dividends in 1942 is $23,658,802, an increase of $1,461,912, over the amount set aside for 1941.

The assigned liabilities amount to $1,067,917,035, of which $954,620,096 constitutes the legal policy reserve. The general surplus or safety fund is $98,581,330.40, which is 9.23 per cent of the liabilities it protects.

New England Mutual Life

The New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. will continue the 1941 scale of divedends through 1942, George Willard Smith, president, informed policyholders in the company's ninety-eighth annual report today.

Both insurance in force and assets of the company increased last year to new high levels, he said. Insurance in force increased by $51,833,-000, bringing the total to $1,858,000,-000, nearly 38 per cent more than at the end of 1929. Assets increased $34,261,000 to a new high total of $535,967,000.

Provident Mueual Life

On January 31, 1942, insurance in force of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia reached a new all-time high of $1,-032,000,000, according to M. Albert Linton, president. This figure is approximately 12 million dollars higher than it was at the end of December, as contrasted with a gain of 24 million dollars during the entire year of 1941.

Atlas Corp. Reports $770,603 Book Loss

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—The common stock portfolio of the Atlas Corporation, an investment company, today showed a heavy turnover for 1941, with 21 issues added and 25 liquidated.

The concern's annual report said net asset value on December 31 was $11.42 a common share, compared with $12.26 a year earlier. Including net loss from sales of securities, there was a net book loss for the year of $770,603, despite a balance, after expenses, of $977,778. For 1940 the company reported a net income of $2,521,022.

109-Year Old Steamship Line Discontinued

Philadelphia, Feb. 11 (AP).—Its fifth war has proved too much for the Nation's oldest steamship line. Officials of the Ericson Line, Inc., announced that with the docking today of its steamer Georgiana, operations would be suspended for the first time in the company's 109-year career.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Closing with gains of 25 to 40 cents, hog prices soared to new four-year peaks today. Best offerings brought 12.90, highest February level in 16 years, as curtailed salable receipts influenced buyers to bid actively.

Firmness in dressed stock also imparted strength to live hogs. Light loins sold at 22½ to 23½ cents a pound, up ½ cent, and equal to the 1942 high.

Stocks Grudgingly Yield More Ground; Preholiday Influence Curtails Buying

New York, Feb. 11—Resistance lines stiffened in some departments of the stock market today but the majority of leaders yielded further ground.

The fairly sharp retreats of Monday and Tuesday apparently put the list in shape for a calmer appraisal of implications of British loss of Singapore which was even more definitely foreshadowed by today's bulletins.

Selective buying, a good part of it probably representing short covering, was chiefly beneficial to oils, motors, rubbers and coppers. Steels could make no progress and many of the higher priced industrials dipped nearer to the December lows.

Tomorrow's recess for the Lincoln's Birthday observance persuaded those with buying intentions to operate conservatively, but this factor was also credited for stimulating covering on the theory the holiday might bring some favorable news and thus open the way for sizable rally. In this connection speculative circles pointed out prices have had a considerable fall so far this month and numerous stocks are not far from their lows for the last year or more.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite recorded a net decline of .1 of a point at 36.7. Transactions fell to 415,440 shares compared with yesterday's 639,960.

Stocks finishing with small gains included Standard Oil (NJ), Texas Co., General Motors, Goodrich, and International Harvester. Dupont slid off to a new 1941-42 low. Others in the loss group included Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Case, Douglas, Philip Morris, Allied Chemical, and American Telephone.

Just a bunch of Latins from Manhattan, that's all they are, the people in CBS's international short wave department in New York.

For it's from there, in large, that Latin America is getting its news of the world. The program, "Noticias del Norte," which you, of course, will instantly translate as "News of the North," is heard throughout South America seven days a week via Columbia's two short wave stations, WCRC and WCBX, and the Radio Belgrano Chain, which is CBS's Latin American network affiliate in Argentina.

Although it's intended to give listeners detailed and coldly factual news on matters affecting hemisphere solidarity, the program, nonetheless, is given a dramatic presentation.

A newsboy's chant introduces Roberto Unanue and Jose Santos Quijano, both of whom speak in Spanish, one giving summaries, the other giving completer details, then both discussing the implications of the same.

There are other news periods, in Portuguese, for Brazil, and in English, too, for those who speak it in the countries to the south.

And it might be worth while noting that Columbia in New York has started regular courses in Spanish and Portuguese for its employes there who want to take them up. To date approximately 200 have registered.

Latins from Manhattan are getting more and more frequent, as you can see.

Veterans of Last World War Renew Study Habit

Madison, Wis., Jan. 29 (INS).—Demonstrating beyond middle life a yearning to advance in knowledge through study oppotunities, 1114 Wisconsin veterans of the last World War have continued their education through State-subsidized courses of study, offered by the University of Wisconsin extension division, according to a recent report. The offer of free courses was first made in 1937, and each legislature since then has continued it.

Although more than two decades have pasesd since the conflict, veterans still are registering for courses, according to university extension records. With their advancing years most veterans who enroll manifest a preference for courses that are helpful vocationally. Academic subjects are frequently taken, however, especially in the field of English.

Sigma Nu Phi to Meet

Sigma Nu Phi legal fraternity will hold a founder's day banquet tonight at 8 at the Lafayette Hotel and will hear Justices Oscar Luhring and Divid A. Pine, members of the group.

Godfrey L. Munter, past lord high chancellor, will be toastmaster. Herbert H. Murray has been named historian.

Contract Bridge

A victory was scored against two of the country's great stars, Mrs. A. M. Sobel and Charles H. Goren, of Philadelphia, when their neatly bid slam was overcalled by two Columbus, Ohio, players, vulnerable, at the range of seven, and the save was profitable. Dr. Louis Mark and Trent Hines, the gallant defenders, were set four tricks for a penalty of 1100 points, which at match-point duplicate was a very fine gain over the 1430 points they would have lost ha dthey let Mrs. Sobel and Goren have their slam. This hand, shown in today's box, was played at the Winter Nationals.

Laura Ingalls To Take Stand At Trial Today

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Chubby Laura Ingalls—society girl, vaudeville dancer, stunt flier and isolationist agitator—will try from the witness stand today to persuade 12 District Court jurors that her slurs on America were just part of a lone campaign to expose the Nazi baron who paid her to fight for neutrality and against aid to England.

Should the jurors—two women and ten men—believe the tense-lipped, nervous mannered defendant, she hopes to be cleared of the charge that she failed to register as a paid agent of the German government.

Should she be convicted she would face a $1000 fine, or a prison term of 8 to 24 months, or both.

The way was cleared late yesterday for Miss Ongalls to tell her story when Justice James W. Morris ruled that she would be allowed to testify about the motives upon which she claims she acted when she went to the German embassy and offered to aid the German cause.

Justice Morris upheld the contention of James F. Reilly, Miss Ingalls' counsel, that the jurors ought to consider her motives in determining whether she was controlled by "criminal intent" when she failed to register her Nazi connection as the law required. The prosecutors claimed that if she intended the acts she actually did, her more general motives made no difference.

However, Justice Morris agreed with Special Prosecutor M. Neil Andrews that the Government had presented a prima facie case and that the evidence was proper. The justice overruled two defense motions for mistrials.

Aided by Special Prosecutor Dewey Balch and Special Agent Daniel T. McLaughlin of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Andrews yesterday gave the jurors a long series of letters exchanged between Miss Ingalls and Julia Kraus, the go-between who kept her in touch with Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, second secretary of the German Embassy.

Federal agents spent several months gathering evidence against Miss Ingalls, by hiding in the shrubbery near von Gienanth's home and eavesdropping on apartment rendezvous. McLaughlin and Balch, who is in the Department of Justice national defense section, directed this inquiry.

Wears Chic Clothing

Miss Ingalls has worn the same air of troubled concentration since the trial began Monday. But she has had different costumes daily, which were audibly admired by the women who make up more than half the capacity audience.

For yesterday Miss Ingalls chose a sand-colored suit, with a tan Ascot scarf of soft silk, which almost concealed a blouse of vivid orange satin. Her shoes were dark brown suede oxfords, her hat a dark gray, with the turned-up brim she favors, with a large ornament on the band.

Her letters to Miss Kraus told how she had shared platforms with Representative Hamilton Fish and Charles A. Lindbergh. She took occasion to remark that Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, an Administration supporter, seemed to her a "sinister" man, a cross between "a convict and Simon Legree."

Letters to "Mama"

Miss Ingalls urged the go-between to pass on all her letters to "Mama" (her code word for Von Giennath), with the assurance of her complete loyalty. She needed money, she wrote and was trying to get on the payroll of the America First Committee. Miss Kraus got money from Von Giennath and wired it to her.

Miss Kraus testified that she did pass the letters on to the baron. As they were read, the stout, middle-aged go-between twisted round in the witness chair, away from the flier whom she had addressed as "Sweet Child," and stared fixedly at the wall, her face twitching.

The German Embassy, said Miss Kraus, offered Miss Ingalls a salary of $250 a month but she wanted $300. Von Goenanth made up the difference, Miss Kraus said.

The day Germany declared war, Miss Kraus asserted, Miss Ingalls came here and said she wanted von Goenanth to give her the names of people "who can continue our work in this country."

Five $20 bills left at the home of Miss Kraus on December 17, after the war began were for Miss Ingalls, Miss Kraus said she was told. Justice Morris ordered this testimony stricken, as hearsay.

To Dr. Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires, Miss Ingalls wrote:

"Without America they (the British) are beaten. Heil Hitler!"

"Some day I will shout my triumph to a great leader and a great people!"

"I could tear the skies in triumph—Crete and now the Hood (which had just been reported sunk) . . . Heil Hitler!"

To Catherine Curtis, promoter of peace organizations, Miss Ingalls wrote:

"I have always known that the best way to keep the United States out of war was to pray for, or aid a swift German victory . . . Visit me in my little chalet near Berchtesgaden."

(Hitler also has a chalet near Berchtesgaden.—Editor's Note.)

Griffin Admits Parley With Viereck

By the United Press

William Griffin, editor and publisher of the New York Enquirer who was subpenaed to appear here before a Federal grand jury investigating Axis propaganda, said last night he conferred with George Sylvester Viereck, alleged Nazi propagandist, but only to protest Germany's "disgraceful" persecution of Jews.

Griffin's formal statement was made public by his brother-in-law, William J. Rapp, who said the publisher is in Washington but is ill and probably will not appear before the grand jury until sometime next week.

The statement, issued to "clarify" Griffin's position relating to issuance of the subpena, declared that the New Yorker first learned of the grand jury's action while in Cuba on business relating to his publication.

Truck Driver Is Indicted

The District Grand Jury yesterday returned a manslaughter indictment against a 30-year-old truck driver, as the aftermath of a Christmas Eve traffic crash which resulted in the death of a 5-year-old girl who was shopping for a Christmas tree with her mother.

The charge was brought against Robert R. Russell, Negro, of 61 Pierce Street Northwest, whose truck collided with a car driven by Mrs. Mary E. Holt, of 1816 Bay Street Southeast, killing her daughter, Diane Marie Holt.

Also among the 45 indictments handed up by the grand jurors was one charging a 36-year-old Dutch citizen with falsely swearing that he was a native American citizen while employed as a WPA worker.

He is alleged to have made the false statements because he was afraid of losing his job.

The charges against those indicted were:

Second degree murder—Herbert Hoover Beckwith, 43, Negro, for the death of John Wheeler, 39, Negro, from ax wounds received at 487 Cullinane Court Southwest on December 24, 1941.

Manslaughter—Robert R. Russell, 30, Negro, for the death of Diane M. Holt, 5, as a result of a traffic accident at Fifteenth and D Streets Northeast on December 24, 1941.

Nationality Act violation—Jelle J. DeGraaf, 36.

Violating narcotic laws—Hazel Stern, 36, Negro, two indictments; John Frye, 27, Negro; Victoria Golden, 31, Negro; Benjamin F. Sewell, 31, Negro; Mary H. Kline, 32.

Violating Marihuana Tax Act—Sidney Foster, 24, Negro; Irvin M. Thompson, 26, Negro.

Unauthorized use of automobile—James Johnson, 18, Negro, and Joseph H. Davis, 18.

Housebreaking and larceny—Henry Rushing, 23, Negro, two indictments; William M. Alexander, 26, Negro; Lynnott Surratt, 29, Negro; Herbert Jones, 20, Negro; John W. Smith, 18, Negro; Casa B. Akins, 18, Negro; Edward H. Halley, 26, and Andrew R. Smith, 18.

Assault with dangerous weapon—Sallie McCain, 24, Negro; Harvey Hampton, 40, Negro; Perry McKinney, 26, Negro; Donella Bivings, 26, Negro; Simmie Bell, 36, Negro; William H. Hamilton, 26, Negro, and L. Dennis, 29, also indicted for assault with intent to kill.

Robbery—Cleo Gregory, 22, Negro, and Edison Conyers, 24, Negro.

Forgery and uttering—Nora K. Zell, 31.

Numbers law violations—Allen Ezell, 36, Negro.

Receiving stolen property—Chester W. Williams, 29, Negro, and Beatrice J. Lucas, 35, Negro.

Manslaughter—John R. Hockman, 25, for the death of Ruth E. Dean, 24, as a result of a traffic accident at New Jersey and Virginia Avenues Southeast on December 21, 1941.

Assault with dangerous weapon—Eleanor G. Holmes, 24, Negro; Richard Gerst, 29, Negro; Willie McDaniel, 31, Negro, and Leo A. Ermer, 43.

Unauthorized use of automobile—Charles E. Hughes, 40, and Robert A. Dunn, 46.

War Is Alphabet Project to New Deal, Charges Landon

Charging that New Dealers are treating the war as "just another political alphabet project," Alfred M. Landon last night declared Americans should change leaders whenever "bungling management" of the war endangers military success.

In an address before the annual Lincoln Day dinner in the Mayflower Hotel, the 1936 G. O. P. Presidential nominee declared there is a "growing anger at the weakness in administration of the war funds."

"The people are ready for united action," he asserted. "But the sound of their leader's trumpet has been obscured. The babel of conflicting agencies in the Nation's Capital is creating confusion throughout the Nation. Because of a lack of frankness we are not sufficiently aware of what is required of us. We are not efficiently girding ourselves for battle."

Party Faithful Attend

The former Kansas Governor spoke beneath a bunting-draped picture of Abraham Lincoln to an assemblage of 500 of the party faithful, among them a dozen Senators and two score or more Representatives. The dinner, held the day before Lincoln's birthday this year to allow Congressmen to fill speaking dates elsewhere, was given by the Republican members of Congress and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia. Lincoln Day dinners throughout the country will warm up the Republicans for the fall elections.

Landon ascribed to the Republican Party the task of stimulating the efficient prosecution of the war while at the same time seeing that the transaction of public affairs is "not disturbed by New Deal planning for a totalitarian collecti vism."

"The failure that is marking the production of war materials," he asserted, "is matched by the failure of the Administration to work out plans for meeting dislocation caused by all-out war."

Specifically, he said, the American people want these results: Production adequate to the needs of the armed forces; certainty that defense funds are not wasted in nondefense expenditures nor misused because of incompetent management, and prevention of all war profiteering.

"The people," he said, "are united in agreement that the crying need at this time is coordination and organization of our entire war effort."

The President, Landon charged, "has not made clear the staggering sacrifices ahead of us."

"We have never experienced anything like it in our history," he declared. "Life will not be again, in our time, as we have heretofore known it. But we have a job to do, and we are going to do it."

Fire the Incompetent

But, he said, the triumph "must not be delayed, or even threatened, by incompetent and unskillful leadership, at home or on the battlefield.

"We might well take a leaf from the book of our English cousins," he suggested. "Their determination to win ultimate victory never changes. But they do change leaders, in the field or at home, whenever bungling management of their wars endangers military success."

Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican leader of the House and chairman of the party's national committee, in his speech at the dinner, said "Republicans will continue vigorously to support the President," but declared "we must keep alive the two-party system of government."

James E. Watson, former Senator from Indiana, paid tribute to the Civil War President in an address entitled "Lincoln." Representative Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, read the Gettysburg address. Representative Raymond S. Springer, of Indiana, presided. Doris Doe, of the Metropolitan Opera, and the Howard University double quartet sang. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation.

Capital to Honor Lincoln's Memory

The Army Band will play and two dozen organizations will lay wreaths in this observance of Abraham Lincoln's birthday at 12:30 p. m.

Branches of the service will be represented at the ceremonies, sponsored annually by the District Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. The order will hold a luncheon at the Army and Navy Club afterwards.

Representative U. S. Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, will speak at a celebration tonight at the First Congregational Church in observance of Lincoln's birthday. The event is sponsored by the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the G. A. R.

Washington Branch, No. 4, of the Fleet Reserve Association will hold an Americanism party at 8:15 p. m., Knights of Pythias Hall, 1012 Ninth Street Northwest. There will be speakers, refreshments, dancing to music of the United States Navy School of Music Band. Shipmates of the Washington area are invited. No charge, no collection.

Jap Relic Received

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 11.—"Just a piece of a plane which a Jap flew too low over our Motor Park," wrote Corpl. Robert W. Cleland, Hagerstown boy to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gordon, Hagerstown, in a letter received yesterday which contained a piece of bright metal, with fabric attached.

Flanagan Nomination To Be Studied Today

A special Senate District Subcommittee will consider the nomination of James H. Flanagan, utilities analyst for the Securities and Exchange Commission, for a District Public Utilities Commission post at 3 p. m. today in the Senate District Committee room.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, heads the special subcommittee. Other members are Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, and Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas.
